No Drama In Depression. Building Jobs, in Paris. 20,000 Suicides, Yearly. As Usual In Revolution.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

A WEST INDIAN hurricane struck Porto Rico, causing great suffering with many left in want. "Immediate help" is asked and this government will supply it. A hurricane is dramatic, it appeals to the imagination.

Another sort of hurricane struck the United States in 1929, and is still raging, with much suffering. But an economic hurricane is not dramatic.

Victims do not see pictures of themselves or their wrecked homes in the papers, and nothing much is done about that hurricane.

IN CONNECTION with lack of employment it may interest you to know that our government is spending two millions of dollars on a new "American chancery." The work, however, is being done in Paris, on the Place de la Concorde.

The money will go to French workers and to 20 French subcontractors, who say they are delighted because just now building is not active in Paris. The money contributed by American taxpayers is spent that one of our American ambassadors, whose jobs are usually a reward for political services or cash contributions, may be housed "more worthily."

It is too bad that American stonemasons, bricklayers and carpenters can't speak French. They might go abroad and get a job with their government.

TWENTY THOUSAND men, women and children commit suicide in this country every year. Dr. Louis L. Dublin, statistician of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, says more men than women commit suicide, and lack of character or mental maturity is largely responsible for self-destruction. The recent increase in suicide is not entirely due to the depression. There has been a suicide increase every year since 1925, without exception.

Lack of interest in life accounts for many suicides. About forty years ago a New York newspaper discussed throughout one summer the question "Is Suicide a Sin?" While the discussion lasted, the number of suicides diminished remarkably. Those with thoughts of suicide joined the discussion and had something to make life interesting.

BOOTLEG WHISKY has increased suicide. A young woman "professional tap dancer" fell out of a fourth story window in New York, fracturing both legs, skull and spine. Two men explained to the policeman that there had been "an all night drinking party."

SPAIN'S revolution follows the usual course. Landed estates of the rich are seized, the vast holdings of dukes, counts and assorted grandees, and divided among the peasants. This was done in Russia, and the fact that moujiks own the land on which they were formerly slaves, in reality if not in name, is the chief support of the Soviet system.

French peasants got the nobles' land in exchange for worthless money. France did not let the Germans pass at Verdun, because every man in the French army was related to some one of the millions of French landowners or himself owned land west of Verdun.

The success of Charles the Twelfth of Sweden was based largely on the fact that his predecessor had divided the land among the people, taking it from the nobles. That gave the Swedish soldiers that went to Russia with Charles a determination to get home.

In this country actual landowners are comparatively few, and rapidly becoming fewer, with farm mortgages foreclosed by the thousands. Uncle Sam announces that he will not immediately take farms from the farmers that can't pay him what they owe. A good idea.

JOHN WALKER, of 106 North Johnson street, Big Springs, Tex., would like to reply to Admiral Sim's statement that the Spanish War lasted only 114 days. More than 200,000 engaged in it. Nearly all the mer have pensions costing now $119,000,000 a year. According to Admiral Sims, that is a disgrace.

John Walker says he draws a pension as a Spanish War veteran. He served in the Spanish-American War in 1898, the Philippine Insurrection in 1899, all of 1900 and up to June 3rd, 1901, and calls that more than 114 days.

Mr. Walker cannot understand why Admiral Sims, retired, should get a good big pension, whereas he is begrudged a very small pension.

In the opinion of this writer, all pensions, honorably acquired, are good for the country. They put cash where it is needed, and that's as important as scattering rain where it is needed.

THOSE DESIRING the election of Gov Roosevelt will find interesting one paragraph of a letter received from John Francis Neylan, a wise young man of San Francisco.

"Roosevelt has just left California. He is one of the few political candidates who ever came to this state and did not succeed in committing political suicide."

POPE PIUS ordered Catholics in Mexico to obey Mexico's religious laws, while likening persecution of Catholics in Mexico to the persecution in Russia.

The Pope declines to request that churches in Mexico be closed in protest against the Mexican government's action because "such a step would mark the end of all public worship and result ultimately in

DAVIS CASE MISTRIAL; JUROR VISITS MARGIOTTI

4 Dance Girls Seized; 250 Flee Raid on Show

Officials Leap Out Windows at Vandergrift

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., Oct. 3.—"Gentlemen . . . the main event of the evening!"

More than 250 persons—some said 400—crowded the auditorium wherein the main event was to take place.

Undulating to music (that satisfied) four girls attired in little else than maidenly modesty (if that) took up their position before the footlights.

"Whoopee!"
"Do your stuff, kid!"
"Make it hot!"

Up in the front row . . . the "bald-headed row" . . . sat high officials of Vandergrift and leaders in the business and industrial life of the community. Scions of wealthy families were there, too . . . in fact, all ranks of life of this community. Some Pittsburghers were said to be there.

Then crash . . . bang . . . and again crash!

The entrance of state troopers was believed by spectators to be part of the show, the police as actors.

They were directed to the stage. Sergt. Bunch heeded the advice. Then he announced it was a raid, and his words were echoed through the hall.

JUMP OUT WINDOWS

But most of the hundreds rushed toward exits guarded by the stalwarts of the law.

There they were permitted to depart after giving their names, practically all fictitious. Burgess William Dick aided the state troopers in the identification of the "guests."

The pianist, C. D. Raymond, of Pittsburgh, and four girls who said they were beauty parlor operators in Pittsburgh, were arrested. The girls gave their names as Betty Sailor, Barbara Fleming, Adelaide Healey and Pat Barnes.

MAN LINKED IN TRUNK KILLINGS

Winnie Judd Reveals Friend Dismembered Girl's Body

By EDWARD LABOWITCH
International News Service.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Oct. 3.—Winnie Ruth Judd has told the "inside story" of the "trunk slaying" of her friends, Agnes Ann Leroi and Hedwig Samuelson.

This was revealed here today by Sheriff James McFadden, of Phoenix, Ariz., who said that Mrs. Judd will confirm her verbal narrative with a startling signed statement to be given him some time this week.

Mrs. Judd will name a prominent and wealthy Pheonix businessman as the person who she claims aided her in disposing of the bodies, but had no knowledge of the slayings until she sought his aid, the Sheriff said.

Mrs. Judd is now in state prison at Florence, Ariz., under sentence of death and with an appeal pending in the Arizona Supreme Court for a new trial. Sheriff McFadden said:

"Mrs. Judd sent word to me Friday that she was ready to sign a statement regarding the slaying of her two friends.

"She has already told me orally that the girls were slain by her following a quarrel in the Leroi woman's apartment, after the two women had threatened to tell Dr. W. C. Judd, her husband, of Mrs. Judd's friendship with a prominent Phoenix man.

"Mrs. Judd told me that the Samuelson girl came at her with an istol, she her in the hand, and struck her in the breast with a butcher knift. Then Mrs. Judd said she wrested the weapon from Miss Samuelson, and shot her to death, and left her lying on the floor.

"The Leroi woman then advanced towards her and she shot her in the face.

"Then she went to her own home about a mile distant where her friend was waiting. He did not know of the slayings.

"Mrs. Judd then said that she told the man of her actions, and that he went to the Leroi woman's apartment, promising Mrs. Judd that he would dispose of the bodies.

GLASS PLANT GIVES WORK TO 1,000

Industries Increase Forces; Big Outlay For Repairs

Mr. Wherrett said that approximately 1,000 men and women had been recalled to work.

Five hundred men were recalled to work at the A. M. Byers plant at Ambridge, and 1,800 men returned to work at the Standard Tinplate Company at Canonsburg.

Defense Seeks Delay In New Trial Until After Election

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The two-week-old "lottery" trial of United States Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, was washed off the court books today when a mistrial was caused by a juror visiting Chief Defense Counsel Charles J. Margiotti and complaining about the attitude of another juror.

Margiotti, who reported the matter, was commended by Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman, who termed the conduct of the complaining juror as "highly improper," while exonerating the other juror.

The government will conduct an investigation of the incidents leading up to a mistrial, it was learned.

Henry J. Moore, juror No. 7, who paid a visit to the hotel suite of Margiotti last Friday night after court adjourned over the week-end,

SERIES FARCE, SAYS WALSH

By DAVIS J. WALSH
International News Service.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—It's all over now, this most preposterous of world series, with the New York Yankees winning yesterday in four straight games to establish one of many records, but proving very little except that, of two hugely unsatisfactory ball clubs, the Chicago Cubs were much the worse. They started out to win yesterday's game with four runs in the first inning and finished behind a 13 to 6 performance that shamed baseball's prestige and left the stands convulsed. Yes, it's all over, but its memory will linger on to furnish many a coarse, low jest in the years to come.

As a lampoon, it had no equal. As an exhibition of baseball, it emphasized daffiness and featured the grotesque, serving no purpose except to indicate that Punchinello missed his vocation and Ziegfeld died too soon. Had he lived, he'd have had the 1932 world series in the Follies.

In Criminal Court today 12 men and women petit jurors are listening to the devious story of last April's political war in the Sixth Ward—and juror No. 7 is Mrs. Mary Snyder Drew, wife of Justice James B. Drew, of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

The case involves an aggravated assault charge against Constable Luke Hannan and Bernard Junius. It is an outgrowth of the Sullivan-O'Malley feud in the Strip, which brought about the defeat of P. J. Sullivan for Congress.

The constable and his companion are charge with smacking Adam Zadke, of 2714 Spring way, over the head with a gun butt. Hannan, in addition, is accused of pushing his fist in the face of Ben Kopp, 2741 Liberty avenue.

The case is being tried before Visiting Judge Charles D. Copeland, of Westmoreland County.

COX SELLS CAR TO GET FUNDS

KINGMAN, Ariz., Oct. 3.—Members of the Jobless Party campaign caravan are headed eastward. They passed through here this morning, after 18 hours of travel over desert and mountains.

In Hollywood Saturday the candidate found it necessary to sell an automobile to get sufficient funds to keep his broadcasting car and companions moving homeward. In spite of financial difficulties, however, Father Cox is convinced his cross-country trek has been a success. He told Hollywood reporters:

"We have sown the seeds of a political revolution. Sentiment encountered throughout the country has shown that the handwriting is on the wall for both the Democratic and Republican parties."

Insull Stock Deal Profit Bared

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(INS.)—State's Attorney John A. Swanson announced today that his investigators had uncovered a stock transaction by Samuel Insull with the Insull Utilities Investments, Inc., by which he netted a profit of $374,400.70.

Samuel Insull was chairman of the board of the company.

Meanwhile Federal Judge Walter C Lindley, conducting the bankruptcy hearing, was assured by James Simpson, receiver for several of the Insull companies that Samuel Insull, Jr., would voluntarily return from Paris before November 10, to testify.

The October grand jury which will launch an inquiry into the collapse of the Insull utility and investment domain was sworn in today.

Jazz Replaces Hymns, Church Crowded

TOLEDO, O., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—It was "boop, boop-a-doop" and a packed house at the First Westminster Presbyterian Church last night.

Sacred music was replaced by snappy jazz, tooted by a night club orchestra, at the direction of Dr. Elwood A. Rowsey, the pastor, who also is city welfare director. Dr. Rowsey explained his Sunday night services are not ritualistic, but of a popular nature. He said:

"I have told the people that if they do not like anything about these services they can stay at home. In consequence, our church is packed on Sunday evening, and people come from miles around."

JAPAN BALKS AT LEAGUE FINDINGS ON MANCHURIAN 'WAR'

TOKIO TACTICS CONDEMNED BY PROBE

Stern Indictment of Military Drive Drafted

By ARNO DOSCH-FLEUROT
International News Service.

GENEVA, Oct. 3.—Japan will not accept the findings of the Lytton commission report on Manchuria, International News Service learned from an authorized Japanese source today.

Publication of the report, which flatly condemned Japanese aggression against China, bore out exclusive revelations by International News Service seven weeks ago that it would contain a stern indictment of the Japanese Manchurian campaign.

JAPAN GRIM

Although the document drew praise from European statesmen, its attitude merely has stiffened the determination of Japan not to permit the suggestions of the commission to be adopted in Manchuria.

The Japanese official revealed, however, that his country was willing to use as a basis for further negotiations the references to Manchuria contained in chapter X of the commission's findings, providing for an international advisory council to discuss constitution of "a special regime for administration" of Manchuria.

The commission's suggestion that all military forces be withdrawn from Manchuria and the country policed by a gendarmerie to be organized with collaboration of foreign instructors will be flatly rejected, the official said.

The spokesman confirmed reports from Tokio to the effect that Japan welcomes the first three chapters of the report, which set forth the "political upheavals, social disorders and disruptive tendencies" prevalent in China.

TOKIO OPPOSITION

But every conclusion drawn by the commission, including recommendation of Manchurian autonomy, will be opposed by Japan, with all the force at its command.

The necessity for international action to create a stable Chinese government, the spokesman insisted, automatically invalidates all the findings of the commission.

He made it clear that Japan has no intention, under any circumstances, of removing her troops from Manchuria.

Meanwhile, observers agreed that publication of the report threw the whole problem into the lap of the League of Nations and made it incumbent upon that body to take some decisive action.

The fact that the five members of the commission, representing as many governments, agreed unanimously on all conclusions reached, endowed the report with great weight.

The United States, it was said, will be equally concerned with the others in action to be taken as a result of the report, especially in view of the speech of Secretary of State Stimson on Saturday in which he vigorously reiterated the American policy of non-recognition of territories gained by force of arms.

DEMOCRAT SEES BIG HOUSE GAIN

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Representative Byrns, of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee, considers that a "conservative estimate of the Democratic majority in the next House is 100."

The Tennessee Democrat made this statement to newspapermen at a press conference held as he packed his bags yesterday to leave for New York, where he will report the results of his canvass of the situation to party leaders. He said:

"Three months ago I predicted that we Democrats would have at least 50 to 75 more seats in the next House, but I was too conservative. Reports from the northern, eastern and western states convince me we will have a majority of at least 100 and probably more.

"Indications are that six Democrats at least will win in Pennsylvania, while nearly all of the Ohio states are going to be occupied by Democrats in the Seventy-third Congress."

UPHOLD HOOVER CITIZEN STATUS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—A letter from W. R. Castle, Jr., acting secretary of state, asserting "there never has been any question of Mr. Hoover's status as an American citizen," has been made public by Henry J. Allen, director of publicity of the Republican National Committee.

Allen said in an accompanying statement issued yesterday through the committee, that "malicious stories regarding President Hoover's citizenship, which were circulated during the 1928 campaign and officially exposed then as false, have been revived in the present campaign."

Castle, Allen said, made "a new and independent inquiry" last month at his request because of revival of the stories.

CURTIS INVADES FOES' DOMAIN

KANSAS CITY, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The extensive tour of Vice President Charles Curtis today brings the Republican campaigner to Kansas City, stronghold of the Democrats.

Planning to spend the entire day here, the Vice President has arranged a series of conferences with party leaders of Missouri and Kansas. Tonight he will be the principal speaker at a Republican rally to be held at the Armory. The address, sponsored by the Republican National Committee, will be broadcast by WDAF at 10 p. m., eastern standard time.

BANK OPENINGS SET FOR OCT. 15

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Plans for opening the 12 federal home loan banks about two weeks hence will be drawn here Wednesday at a conference between members of the system's board of directors and officials of the regional banks.

Franklin W. Fort, chairman of the home loan bank board, has summoned the chairman, vice chairman and prospective president of each of the banks to the conference at 9:30 a. m. Wednesday. It is expected to last three days.

On their return home, the regional officers will begin organizing with a view to opening the banks for business on the morning of October 15.

The banks, located at strategic points throughout the country, are intended to ease the home mortgage situation by advancing money to institutions holding such paper. Board members have explained they expect the increase in mortgage money will relieve pressure on the small home owner.

Phila. Opera Cancels Season, Goes Modern

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The Philadelphia Grand Opera Company has suspended performances for the present season with a view to perfecting a new "drama with music," which, it hopes, will mark the beginning of a new era for the lyric stage.

Announcement of the suspension was made by Mrs. William C. Hammer, vice president and general manager of the company, as she disclosed the plans of the organization for the ensuing year. She said:

"The opera in its present form is out of date. We have no taste for the old hackneyed standbys. We plan to present operas in an entirely new form, a form in keeping with modern thoughts and ideas.

"The old, familiar back drops will be replaced with modern sets and lights. Singers will be selected for their appearance as well as their voices."

Under the direction of Leopold Stokowski, blond maestro of the Philadelphia Orchestra and an honorary director of the Grand Opera company, the latter organization plans to spend an entire year perfecting plans for its new type of presentation. It will combine drama, music and the dance, which, Mrs. Hammer said, "is an ideal which has always been the aim of this company."

GOV. ROOSEVELT CHALLENGES TAMMANY

Insists on Lehman as Head of State Ticket

International News Service.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Fresh from his 9,000-mile swing about the West, which, he is convinced, he will carry in November, Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt plunged into local politics today, temporarily, at least, abandoning the national field.

National issues were shelved for the time being while the presidential nominee sought to straighten out a domestic situation, which may have much to do with how New York goes in the national election.

CONFERS WITH CURRY

Within two hours after he got off his transcontinental train, Gov. Foosevelt had a conference with John F. Curry, the Tammany leader, and John H. McCooey, the boss of Brooklyn.

Tammany and its allies are kicking strenuously over "swallowing" Gov. H. H. Lehman for Governor, and Mr. Roosevelt is insisting upon it.

When Curry and McCooey emerged from the Roosevelt conference, they were asked what was discussed. Curry said, gravely:

"The western trip."

"Any decision on the gubernatorial nomination?"

McCooey replied:

"We thought we would wait till we see what the Governor has to say tonight."

Gov. Roosevelt will address the state convention tonight.

In his insistence upon Lehman's nomination, Roosevelt has an ally in Alfred E. Smith. But while Roosevelt and Smith are actuated by a common desire to see Lehman nominated, they are working wholly separately to achieve it.

CONVENTION HARMONY

Despite the party bitterness that has grown up over the governorship fight, the state convention, at its opening session today, gave every outward appearance of harmony.

Curry, himself, moved the resolution which "congratulated the state and nation" on the "high character and ability" of the national ticket of Roosevelt and Garner.

United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, in his keynote speech as temporary chairman, asasiled President Hoover's administration and predicted Roosevelt's election in one of the greatest Democratic landslides in the nation's history.

Wagner charged the Republican party with using the same "cunning propaganda," he said it used in 1928 when "it sold Mr. Hoover to the American people as the chief custodian of prosperity." He thundered:

"This time, however, the public refuses to be fooled."

Park Benches Solve Problem of Library

CONCORD, N. H.—Overcrowding of the Concord public library was solved by Chairman Willis D. Thompson, of the board of trustees, even though he could not secure an appropriation for an enlargement. Thompson, a hardware merchant, gave the library six green benches, and an outdoor division was established in a vacant lot alongside the building.

Postponement of Debt Linked to Vote Race

By JULIUS G. BERENS
Financial Editor New York American.

The American public has suddenly awakened to the actuality that one of the war debt installments due the United States has been "postponed" at the discretion of our secretary of the treasury.

True, Germany's obligation involved but $7,800,000.

But what does this portend with respect to the $269,000,000 due us in December from other European nations on the war debt account?

Is the German action a forerunner of similar decisions toward all of our debtors?

Is not the "postponement" of the German debt indicative of the true attitude of the present administration toward the whole war debt question?

The entire $11,000,000,000 of war debts are involved in the Secretary of the Treasury's permission to delay the German payment.

It is popularly supposed that the debt agreements entered into so solemnly require a 90-day notice of postponement FROM THE CREDITOR NATION.

A "joker" in the agreements, however, grants authority to the Secretary of the Treasury to waive this notice. This he has done for Germany.

Never has this power been more welcome to the debt-cancellationists than at the present time!

Fearful of the American public's wrath were it to become known that ALL of the war debtors plan "postponement" of their next installments on their debts, the Treasury Department and the administration have adopted a policy of strictest secrecy regarding the major war debts due AFTER THE ELECTION.

Behind the scenes, nevertheless, there is the greatest degree of activity in the cancellationist quarter.

Not until the zero hour did Secretary Mills reveal to the public Germany's intention to delay her payment. The Treasury Department by its own admission was aware of Germany's intention three months ago.

Will the same procedure be followed with regard to the other allied war debts to us?

Will the American public awaken some fine day AFTER ELECTION to find that the $269,000,000 justly due has again been "postponed?"

Does the administration plan to repudiate congressional opposition to further debt delay or revision or cancellation, in its frantic desire to play EUROPE'S game?

Has the Secretary of the Treasury ALREADY PROMISED our debtors he will exercise his discretion in THEIR favor?

Did the mysterious Secretary Skinner-hide-and-seek game of the Bank of England's governor assure this connivance of silence BEFORE ELECTION and postponement AFTER ELECTION?

A vast game is being played with American taxpayers' money, ELEVEN THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS OF IT.

The cancellationists are staking their all in the effort to bamboozle the public into a sense of security UNTIL AFTER THE ELECTION.

But their REAL THOUGHTS AND ACTIONS cannot be concealed.

FISH ATTACKS ROOSEVELT

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
International News Service.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Delivering the keynote address at the Republican state convention which opened today, Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, temporary chairman, vigorously assailed Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, the Democratic presidential nominee, for the "promises" he has been making on his campaign tour, and predicted that President Hoover, whom he characterized as the "greatest asset of our republic," will be re-elected in November.

Fish accused Gov. Roosevelt of being ambiguous on important national questions and insisted that Roosevelt has no effective program for economic recovery.

Fish devoted considerable time to flaying not only Gov. Roosevelt, but his running mate, Speaker John N. Garner, the Democratic vice presidential nominee. He was extravagant in his praise of Herbert Hoover and the Hoover administration. He said this is the time for clear thinking and straight speaking, "and not for honeyed words, promises and political buncombe."

Blaine Won't Enter Race as Independent

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—United States Senator John J. Blaine, who was defeated for renomination in the September primary election, today announced he would not seek election next month as an independent candidate.

'NICKEL PLATE' RECEIVER ASKED

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(INS.)—A petition for a receiver in equity for the New York, Chicago and St. Louis Railroad, generally known as the Nickel Plate, was filed in Federal Court today.

The petitioner was Samuel Gaplan, head of a cleaners and dyers organization of Detroit.

His petition declared the railroad, controlled by the Van Sweringen interests of Cleveland, has not paid and is not able to pay $20,000,000 in 6 per cent gold notes due October 1.

It also charges default of $1,200,000 on other gold notes and unpaid taxes amounting to $18,865.

Clergyman Denies Backing Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(Universal.)—The Rev. Allan Stockdale, pastor of the Congregational Church here, which ex-president Coolidge attended, has denied reports from Boston quoting him as being favorable to the candidacy of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Dr. Stockdale said:

"The story about me favoring Roosevelt is a falsehood. I always was and I always will be for the re-election of President Hoover. The statement that I expect Roosevelt will win is totally untrue."

Admiral Dewey's Kin May Go to Annapolis

GLENDALE, Cal.—(INS.)—Jack Dewey, great nephew of Admiral George Dewey, heroic Naval commander of half a century ago, may follow in the footsteps of his famous ancestor. Young Dewey, who is 18 and a senior in high school, is eligible this year for appointment to Annapolis.

The Pope's wisdom is illustrated in Russia, where the closing of churches appears to have destroyed all interest in supernatural religion, except among the old.

One priest is accused of knowing in advance the plans of Obregon's assassin, and of blessing, in advance, the pistol with which the murder was done.

CANNON CAN be useful. British warships with cannon balls are knocking down buildings ruined by the earthquakes in Greece, that endanger lives of inhabitants. Even now the earthquakes continue, eleven within twenty-four hours. Many villagers have been killed by blocks of stone rolling down from cliffs, others drowned by tidal waves when they ran for safety to the beaches.

Fissures have appeared in the earth, some three miles deep, with sea water rushing into them. One mountain is split in two by a crevice two miles long.

In ancient Greek days, some god, goddess or demon would have been supposed to have caused all this, in bad temper.

HOOVER LEAVES TO STUMP IN MID-WEST

Pesident to Give First Speech of Campaigr Tomorrow Night

By GEORGE E. DURNO
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Herbert Hoover ventures forth today to lay his own case before the people.

This afternoon a special train will pull out of the capital carrying the President straight through the hotly contested central states and into Iowa, storm center of the farm revolt.

There, tomorrow night at Des Moines, he will deliver his first campaign address since the speech of acceptance. That it will be a document of considerable political weight is indicated by the care Mr. Hoover is displaying in its preparation.

The President and his board of strategy have been guarding its contents closely, but best available information is that the executive will discuss most of the major issues, bearing heaviest on the farm problem and the subject of excessive federal expenditures for war veterans.

Since the rout of the bonus army from Washington and the President's subsequent reiteration of his unalterable opposition to immediate payment of the bonus, it appears the G. O. P. leaders have determined to force the veterans' issue. Gov. Roosevelt, the Democratic nominee, has remained silent in the face of repeated demands that he express himself on the bonus.

Mr. Hoover is represented as preparing to denounce extravagant and unwarranted expenditures for ex-service men. How he will treat the farm issue remained a mystery.

Today's trip will have all the elements of a major, though brief, political swing. After the presidential special switches to the Rock Island at Chicago tomorrow morning, Mr. Hoover has at least four rear pla orm appearances in prospect before rea.hing Des Moines in later afternoon.

'STRIKE' OF CONVICT WITNESSES AVERTED IN TORTURE TRIAL

State to Ask Death For Pair in Killing Of Youth

International News Service.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 3.—Threatened strike of more than 20 convicts summoned as state's witnesses in the murder trial of George W. Courson, warden, and Solomon Higginbotham, guard, of the Sunbeam chain gang road camp, for the "sweatbox" torture death of Arthur Maillefert, 22-year-old Westfield (N. J.) convict, threw the Circuit Court in an uproar this morning as the trial began.

The convicts, companions of the youth who died from strangulation in the hot, dark confines of the coffin-like prison torture chamber, flatly refused to testify in the trial.

FOUGHT SECRECY

Stringent orders by Circuit Court Judge George Couper Gibbs, aimed at maintaining order during the trial, were misinterpreted by the convicts, leading them to believe the trial was to be conducted behind closed doors.

The convicts relented from their stand when State's Attorney Charles M. Durrance explained the judge's orders.

Defense attorneys asked special protection for Courson and Higginbotham, claiming several threatening notes had been received. One anonymous note, according to Attorney C. A. Everitt, told the former guards they would "never leave the courtroom alive if acquitted."

CONVICTS ANGERED

Twenty convicts from the State Prison, in charge of Superintendent B. H. Dickens, evinced displeasure when the court informed them they would not be paid the regular fee of $2 a day for witnesses.

Death in the electric chair will be asked by State's Attorney Durrance for the two defendants.

The state will seek to prove Higginbotham and Courson had Maillefert placed naked in the "sweatbox" with heavy wooden stocks nailed to his legs and feet. His body drawn erect by a trace chain passed around his neck and drawn over a beam overhead.

GAS LINE LEAKS, RIVER GUARDED

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Fire departments of five cities stood guard today after 200,000 gallons of gasoline had flowed into Boston Harbor and its tributaries by a leak in a pipeline at the Beacon Oil Company's plant in Everett.

Boston Harbor police discovered a heavy coating of gasoline over the water along the shoreline early in the day. The source was traced to the Beacon company's plant.

Warning was sent to Somerville, Medford and Malden. In Boston, fireboats were held in readiness for any emergency.

At high tide, shortly after noon, the gasoline was carried far up the Mystic and Malden rivers. Firemen and volunteers patrolled the banks of the rivers.

More Pleasure Craft Despite Hard Times

WASHINGTON.—Buy a yacht and forget the depression.

Anomalous though it is, that seems to have been the rule during the past year.

Examination of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Navigation records discloses the fact that at the end of the fiscal year the number of documented pleasure craft had increased 9 per cent. The total, 3,692 yachts of 209,221 gross tons, was the largest ever recorded.

LILY PONS SAYS 'NO DIVORCE'

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 3.—(Universal.)—Chic in the latest of sports ensembles from Paris and carrying Ita, her pet jaguar, 98 pounds of dynamic opera star, arrived in Los Angeles last night to make her western debut.

She was the famous coloratura soprano, Lily Pons, whose sensational rise to fame made operatic history.

And after bursting into raptures about "what a big grand country" this great West is, the noted French singer emphaticaiy denied that she plans to divorce August Mesritz, Dutch attorney.

"Divorce? Poof! There's nothing to it. My husband and I live apart only because his work keeps him in Europe and mine keeps me in America. Divorce! There's nothing to it."

Tomorrow night Miss Pons will sing the lead in "Lucia," her first operatic appearance in the West.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The midnight marriage of Marjorie Lackey, 17-year-old daughter of Mayor Dan V. Lackey, and Eddie Sherill, of Louisville, Ky., was annulled by District Judge R. P. Hill. They were married August 12, after they had known each other three days. The annulment was uncontested.

SLEUTHS SIFT MASSIE CASE

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Gov. Lawrence M. Judd, of Hawaii, and John C. Kelley, public prosecutor of Honolulu, went into conference today with officials of a private detective agency which has been conducting an investigation into the case of four Hawaiians accused of attacking Mrs. Thomas H. Massie at Ala Moana a year ago.

The investigation was financed by Gov. Judd from the contingent funds of Hawaii and was begun shortly after Lieut. Massie, naval officer and husband of the victim of the attack; Mrs. Granville R. Fortescue, his mother-in-law, and two Navy enlisted men were convicted of manslaughter in the killing of Joseph Kahahawai, the fifth native accused in the case.

Gov. Judd said that no official statement of the result would be made before tomorrow morning.

MEXICO DEFIES POPE IN FEUD OVER CLERGY

President Threatens To Make Schools, Shops of Churches

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The Mexican government threw down the gauntlet to the Vatican today over last Friday's encyclical in which Pope Piux XI protested what he called "the new and legal persecution" of the church and Catholics in the country. President Abelardo L. Rodriguez said in a statement:

"If the insolent, defiant attitude shown in the recent encyclical continues, I am determined that the churches will be converted into schools and shops for the benefit of the nation's proletariat classes."

The president's statement was followed by an announcement that the national Chamber of Deputies would meet late today to consider the encyclical. The statement said:

"To protest against the laws that in their conception oppress the liberty of the church openly incites the Mexican clergy to disobedience of existing laws and provokes a social disorder within the eternal work of the clergy, which is unable to resign itself to the loss of its dominion of souls and possession of property by which means it held in complete lethargy the proletariat classes that were impiously exploited."

(The Pope's protest was directed particularly at the laws limiting the number of priests in each Mexican state to as few as one priest to each 100,000 inhabitants in the state of Vera Cruz.)

Vatican Not Alarmed By Mexican Defiance

VATICAN CITY, Oct. 3.—(INS.)—The Vatican refused to be alarmed today over the threat of President Rodriguez of Mexico to close the churches there and convert them into schools and factories. A high Vatican official told International News Service:

"We cannot be responsible for any such action.

"If Mexico's statesmen choose to follow in Moscow's footsteps, whatever their pretext may be, the Pope will not be ruffled by any such threats.

INSULTS OUST IRISH CHIEF

LONDON, Oct. 3.—(INS.)—James McNeil, Governor General of the Irish Free State, resigned today, it was announced by W. J. Dulanty, Free State high commissioner in London.

The resignation was accepted by King George.

McNeill's resignation, it was understood, resulted from alleged insults at the hands of the Free State government during the height of the Anglo-Irish dispute over the land annuities and oath of allegiance several months ago.

The Governor General was ignored in invitations sent out for several events at which his attendance was customary, and Irish Free State cabinet ministers were alleged to have "snubbed" him on several occasions.

PUPILS PERILED BY GUN FIGHT

FLINT, Mich., Oct. 3.—(INS.)—One bandit was slain and four persons wounded when state and city police shot it out with two thugs in front of a crowded public school here today, after a 30-mile chase.

None of the hundreds of children who witnessed the climax of the grim battle was hurt, but a patrolman and three adult bystanders were struck by stray bullets.

The youthful unidentified thug was shot and fatally wounded after a 30-mile chase from Pontiac, where he and his companion had robbed four places within 30 minutes. He died in a hospital. His companion escaped.

State Trooper James Smith finally halted the fleeing car with a blast from his shotgun. When the excitement was over he reloaded the gun. It accidentally exploded, wounding Patrolman Herbert Fitzgerald and three bystanders, none seriously.

Married Federal Job Holders Live Apart

WASHINGTON. — (Universal.)—Many husbands and wives employed by the government are living apart so as to save both their jobs, a survey by department chiefs indicates.

In an economy act passed at the last session of Congress there was inserted a provision that where dismissals must occur to keep within the appropriation preference for the blue slip must be given to the husband or wife where both are on the payroll. Divorce is not necessary to effect the coup, as rulings have been made that where the husband and wife are maintaining separate homes they escape the drastic economy act.

Gangland Medical Corps Contains 22 Doctors

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Gangland has its own medical corps. The authority for this is Detective Chief William Shoemaker.

He said yesterday that he had a list of 22 physicians who would treat wounded gangsters and say nothing about it.

He said:

"Not all of these physicians are in this work from choice. Some were made, at the point of guns, to take the cases and then threatened with death if they talked. Thus gangsters got something 'on' them."

HOLD ROBBER SUSPECT

Mrs. Margaret Farmer, 46, of Glenfield, today again identified the man who she says robbed her of $130 in her home September 12, at a hearing before Alderman Ray E. Schneider, North Side.

She had caused the man's arrest in Federal street Saturday when she pointed him out to police.

The accused, Frank Palmer, 29, of 802 Arch street, admitted tying Mrs. Farmer's hands and feet and striking Samuel Ritchie, 27, a farm laborer, on the head with his revolver butt.

Palmer was held for court on four charges. He had served time in Michigan on holdup charges, he told police.

Kentucky Bridge Nearing Completion

HENDERSON, Ky. — (INS.) — The massive new steel bridge being erected by the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company here is expected to be ready for service about the first of the year. Work on the $7,000,000 span has progressed at a faster rate than was predicted.

THAYER BOMB SUSPECT HELD

WORCESTER, Mass., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—A 32-year-old Negro who told police he carried the dynamite used to bomb Judge Webster Thayer's home was in custody today on a charge of vagrancy, as police investigated what they termed their most promising clue to the attempt to kill Judge Thayer.

Police here refused to disclose what James Felton, of New York, the man held, had told them. However, Felton told Boston police Saturday, where he was taken into custody, that he had ridden from New York to Worcester in the automobile which carried the dynamite.

Felton was taken to the Thayer home, where, police said, he showed familiarity with the surroundings.

Hearst Undergoes Minor Operation

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 3.—(INS.)—Col. Joseph Willicombe, secretary to William Randolph Hearst, issued the following statement today:

"Mr. Hearst is at the Cleveland Clinic Hospital for a minor operation which was performed successfully this morning without even the need of a general anaesthetic. Mr. Hearst expects to be on his way to New York in a few days."

Lya de Putti Leaves Only $1,133 Estate

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(INS.)—Fame that she earned for herself on two continents as an actress failed to bring the late Lya de Putti vast wealth, an accounting of her estate disclosed today.

It amounted, after deduction of debts, to $1,333.35. The gross estate was appraised at $4,564.27.

COAST TORRENT CARRIES DEATH MANY MILES

Toll May Never Be Known, Is Belief; 8 Bodies Found

BAKERSFIELD, Cal., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Leaders of volunteers searching the mountainous Tehachapi area for additional victims of Friday's cloudburst expressed the belief today the total death toll never may be known.

Eight bodies have been recovered, 13 other persons have been given up as lost and probably as many as 20 unidentified itinerants were believed swept to their deaths by the 45-foot wall of water that came roaring down Tehachapi Pass with little warning.

CARRIED GREAT DISTANCES

The body of one of the victims Mrs. Louise Kadd, was found 19 miles from her home. Authorities said the force of the water may have carried other bodies greater distances which may prevent their being located. Tons of mud and debris were swept through the canyons and searchers said many bodies undoubtedly have been buried.

Bodies so far recovered were Mrs. Kadd, her husband, Pete; Kadd, operator of a service station at Woodford-Keene; Peter Kadd, Jr., their son, about 20; Mrs. Nell H. Cooper, telegraph operator at Caliente, and three unidentified men and an unidentified youth of about 18 years.

THIRTEEN MISSING

The 13 persons known to have been in the path of the flood waters and of whom no trace has been found were:

Arnella Williams, 2, granddaughter of Mrs. Cooper; A. H. Ross, locomotive engineer; Harry Moore, railroad brakeman, and 10 unidentified men, supposedly itinerants, who were in the Kadd Service Station Restaurant.

Others believed lost in the cloudburst were men riding a freight train sidetracked at Woodford-Keene to await repairs to the railroad track. One of the free riders on the train, who escaped when he saw the water come rushing down the Tehachapi Creek bed, said he saw the water strike the train and fling nearly a score of men helter skelter down the creek.

Moody Over School, Girl Hangs Herself

NEWARK, Del., Oct. 3.—(INS.)—Moody and depressed since her return to school this fall, Ann Hall Anderson, 15-year-old daughter of former Lieut. Gov. J. Hall Anderson, of Delaware, hanged herself in the garage of the Anderson home here during the week-end.

Her body was found last night hanging from a rope tied to two planks she had nailed to the rafters of the garage.

Mullen, 30, wife of Dr. Mullen, dentist, of 834 California avenue, Avalon, was injured seriously today when the car which her husband was driving hit a smaller machine and crashed into a stone dwelling. TRIAL OF DAVIS HALTED BY U. S. JUDGE was put in his own custody by Judge Coleman until tomorrow morning, when the latter said he would make a decision as to what he would do in his case.

A new trial for Davis, charged with violating the federal lottery laws in connection with two charity balls held by the Loyal Order of Moose, of which he is director general, was set on the calendar for next Monday, but the defense will seek a delay until after election.

Margiotti told from the witness stand the story of Juror No. 7's visit to his hotel room.

The chief defense counsel said Moore had met his (Margiotti's) brother-in-law, Dr. W. J. Gatti, of Punxsutawney, Pa., in the subway and got his address from him.

ACCUSES JUROR

Margiotti said that on Friday night Moore, keeping his identity a secret at the time, telephoned him for an appointment.

When Moore came up, he recognized him as a juror, Margiotti said.

The chief defense counsel said that Moore told him that he should watch Juror "No. 14."

In court today, it turned out that Moore had reference to Juror No. 13, who is Abe Weintraub, broker.

Moore told Margiotti, the latter testified, that the other juror had been "putting poison" in the minds of the 11 other men against the defense.

Moore suggested that this other juror should be watched and a United States marshal assigned to him, Margiotti testified.

EXONERATED BY JUDGE

In general, their testimony was similar, that they had not discussed the case nor had heard Weintraub say anything to them which might be interpreted as prejudicing the case.

Moore and Weintraub both were called.

Moore told of three alleged instances in which Weintraub commented. He said that on one occasion Weintraub told him:

"When this is over they will make us all members of the Loyal Order of Moose."

Weintraub testified that he had said nothing to influence any other member of the jury.

Judge Coleman exonerated Weintraub completely. He said:

"The preponderance of evidence shows that the charge against Weintraub is utterly unfounded. He is completely innocent and exonerated of any charge of misconduct as a juror."

The judge then reprimanded Moore for his action. He said:

"No matter what the motive behind your visit to defense counsel was you have worked a hardship on every one connected with the case and wasted two weeks of the work of the court.

"I will make a decision on your case tomorrow morning. I will parole you in your own custody until then."

The court again commended Margiotti for reporting the incident.

Both sides expressed disappointment at the need for going over the technical financial testimony again.

The government in its attempt to show that the former Secretary of Labor profited to the extent of $173,000 from the proceeds of the 1930 and 1931 Moose charity balls, alleged lotteries, had introduced involved and complicated financial transactions.

The defense, in its effort to contradict the charge, has submitted its own share of financial testimony.

When the trial was abandoned today, the defense had neared the end of its case.

Margiotti announced later that he would make a motion to have the trial postponed until after election day.

It was pointed out by the Judge, when he made his declaration of a mistrial, that Margiotti tried to reach him Friday night, immediately after Moore's visit, and tell him of the incident.

Margiotti found Judge Coleman was away from home and informed him of the circumstances on Saturday.

DAVIS' STATEMENT

Senator Davis made the following statement:

"I have the bitterest regret that the case has resulted in a mistrial, as I was absolutely positive that the conclusion of the trial would have completely exonerated me in the next few days.

"My regret is the keener, because I had looked forward to taking the witness stand and demonstrating that I had no part in the alleged lottery and profited in no way therefrom.

"I want to take this occasion to thank my many friends in Pennsylvania who after the indictment and throughout the trial have expressed confidence in me.

"I am certain their trust will continue. I shall press my candidacy for re-election for the United States senatorship as vigorously as possible in the remaining days of the campaign."

14 ESCAPE OHIO REFORMATORY; GUARD HURT

MANSFIELD, O., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Fourteen prisoners in Mansfield Reformatory attempted to escape last night, after one of their number felled a guard with an iron bar.

The guard, Frank E. Hanger, 42, had not recovered consciousness several hours later, and physicians said his condition is critical.

A check-up was awaited today to determine whether any prisoners actually escaped. First reports said five got away, but reformatory officials announced none got out of the prison proper.

PLOT WELL PLANNED

Officials said the attempted break was the outgrowth of a well-planned plot. One of the prisoners involved, they said, was Charles Williams, 22, whose mother, Mrs. Ella Florenz Thompson, Cleveland beauty parlor operator, was arrested here last week, charged with having smuggled saws to her son.

Hangar was struck twice at the base of the skull with an angle iron wielded by Murrell Chandler, Columbus Negro, who had freed himself from a cell in the correction department.

CELLS UNLOCKED

While the guard lay unconscious, Chandler took his keys and unlocked the cells of 13 other convicts. It was 15 minutes later before another guard discovered the situation and spread the alarm.

Police and sheriff's deputies hurried to the scene, fearing a more serious outbreak, but the only prisoners found out of their cells surrendered without resistance when confronted by the armed force.

Supt. T. C. Jenkins said Williams was one of the ringleaders in the plot, but refused to name the others involved until his check-up could be completed.

During the excitement, Assistant Superintendent O. S. Garver shot himself in the leg. His condition is not serious.

One man has lost the sight of an eye and two others have been slightly injured in similar shootings.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The summary of the world series episode might read: One error, one assist, one out.

J. B. Shenke hurriedly locked his drug store yesterday and dashed home to listen to the broadcast of the game, forgetting about a girl making a call in a telephone booth. One error.

The girl pounded on the window and attracted the attention of a passerby, who called police. One assist.

The police, unable to open the door, called a private detective service which guards the store. The detectives unlocked the door, and out walked the girl. One out.

SOCIALIST CHIEF CONFERS HERE

Following a conference yesterday with Pittsburgh Socialist leaders, Mayor Daniel W. Hoan, of Milwaukee, chairman of the Socialist National Campaign Committee, declared that the Socialist party is the only political organization that has a program to meet the depression.

Hoan will speak in Pittsburgh Sunday afternoon at the Fulton Theater. His visit here yesterday interrupted a trip East, where he is speaking on behalf of the candidacy of Norman Thomas for the presidency. The Milwaukee Mayor predicted a record Socialist vote.

Defeat of the La Follettes in Wisconsin he attributed to a lack of program to deal with unemployment. The La Follette defeat, he said, means the beginning of the collapse of progressivism within the two old parties. He said:

"From now on the people will be concerned with economic realities, and will ally themselves with the forces of conservatism or social change."

BRAZIL REVOLT COLLAPSES

RIO DE JANEIRO, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Brazil's three months' old civil war ended today with the complete collapse of the Sao Paulo rebels' command. Col. Carvalho, commander of the Republican guard, assumed power in the rebel city as representative of Gen. Goes De Conteiro, federal army commander.

Reports reaching here said Gen. Bertholdo Klinger, who recently assumed the rebel power after the collapse of the Paulista civilian government, was a prisoner at the disposal of the federal commander.

Gen. Klinger's fall was a result of the failure of peace negotiations which ended when his emissaries refused to accept the federal terms. Gen. Monteiro considered Gen. Klinger no longer possesses sufficient power to control the situation or to treat further as a Sao Paulo chief, so he reached an understanding with Col. Carvalho, who determined to negotiate a separate peace if necessary.

MONTOUR-P.R.R. FIGHT NEAR

BEAVER, Pa., Oct. 3.—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company's showdown fight against the Montour Railroad Company's projected 13-mile extension from Smith's Ferry, Pa., to Negley, O., to link the Ohio River with the Youngstown steel district, will be heard in court here tomorrow. The Cleveland and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania subsidiary, is seeking a permanent injunction against the Ohio (Pa.) Township road supervisors to restrain them from abandoning a highway near the Ohio line, needed as a part of the Montour right of way.

Laborers continued today to clear the right of way along Beaver Creek between Fredericktown, near East Liverpool, and the river. A steam shovel is operating at Smith's Ferry and ties have been trucked along the route.

Walker, Tired and Ill, In Paris on Way Home

PARIS, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Former Mayor James J. Walker, of New York, who left the Italian liner Rex at Gibraltar yesterday to take another boat home, arrived here today suffering from a slight cold and tired from his hurried trip across Spain and France.

He planned to sail for New York on the Europa tomorrow and declined to discuss politics. Since the question of a special election to choose his successor as mayor was still before the courts, he said, it would "absurd" for him to announce his candidacy.

He said he was a private citizen and wanted to be treated as such here. He added he was not thoroughly acquainted with the latest political developments in New York.

POLL INDICATES ROOSEVELT LANDSLIDE

By COLE E. MORGAN
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—With the presidential campaign five weeks to go, Gov. Roosevelt looks a sure winner by a landslide electoral vote.

This is according to political sentiment as measured by more than a third of a million postcard ballots received and tabulated in the nationwide poll of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in co-operation with all the other Hearst morning, evening and Sunday papers in the United States.

On the face of these returns the Democratic nominee is the dominant choice of the voters of 27 states with a combined electoral vote of 278, a dozen more than the 266 necessary to elect.

Only five states, all in New England, appear certain for President Hoover. Their electoral vote totals only 37. This is 241 less than the safe Roosevelt figure.

Three-fourths of the 48 states are this definitely placed. The remaining 16 appear doubtful. They have a combined electoral vote of 216.

The doubtful 216 are divided exactly even, 108 in 10 states leaning to Roosevelt and 108 in six states to Hoover. These are states where the leader is credited with less than 60 per cent of the combined Hoover-Roosevelt poll vote.

In four of Roosevelt's 10 doubtful states he is drawing 55 per cent or better of the poll ballots.

HEARST POLL TERMED BEST

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(Universal.)—Evidence of its reliability was seen today in the intense interest accorded the Hearst newspapers presidential poll. It is recognized as the most complete and accurate effort to get a true expression of the sentiment of the voters throughout the country.

The poll is being studied and checked on daily at both Democratic and Republican national headquarters.

In his radio broadcast on the presidential campaign Saturday night, William Hard, noted journalist and political commentator, referring to the Hearst and the Literary Digest polls, said:

"The Hearst poll is still the bigger of the two. It shows a total of along about 300,000 votes. But now subtract from those votes the number gathered from the states of the solid South, where Hoover has no chance at all and where there is really no contest.

"Then take the remaining votes in all the other 38 states put together, where the two candidates of the two major parties are really contesting. You will find that the proportion between Hoover and Roosevelt is running at the rate of 55 per cent for Roosevelt to 45 per cent for Hoover.

"This really looks better for Hoover than was generally expected six months ago. It then seemed sometimes, if I may put it extravagantly, that nobody was going to vote for him.

"Now, if the Hearst poll is representative, it would seem that if, out of every hundred voters, he could detach six voters from their present habitat in the Roosevelt column, he might be back in the White House. But that's a big order.

"The Hearst poll gives him only three state—Ohio and Kansas and Colorado—in the whole country west of New York and New Jersey. The Digest poll so far doesn't give him even Ohio in the region west of New York and New Jersey."

THIS old proverb, as true in 1932 at McCanns as it has been across fifty-nine years of service, works two ways: Our success has been possible because Pittsburgh has responded nobly to our efforts to make McCanns the outstanding food store in this district. And McCanns deserves this support, for its guarantee "for absolute reliability" is not just a slogan. It's the determining factor in the purchase of all food for resale to McCann customers. MUSIC
VESPER MUSIC
Sacred Heart Church

The music committee of Sacred Heart Church, following an old tradition in the cathedrals of Europe, have inaugurated a new program for Sunday afternoon service under the guidance of Edgar Bowman, parish organist.

Mr. Lissfelt

I attended yesterday afternoon, and for half an hour listened to some beautiful organ music. In the light of that fine nave—colored windows are now lending their most delicate effects—one can sit in meditation and in the most ideal fashion listen to the works of Bach and Cesar Franck and our contemporary writers. Bowman is a good organist and although his instrument may be not as complete as he wishes, yet he manages most skillfully.

Perhaps the fine weather kept the congregation in the open, but as autumn days advance this vesper music should be a real benefaction to greater numbers.

J. FRED LISSFELT.

Yes, indeed, we are still giving away those new "fresh out of the mint,' dollar bills, and plenty of them are here ready for you.

These dollars must come in handy, for I stepped up to a young man, gazing longingly at a new fall chapeau in a haberdasher's window, CHARLES RINALDI, 373 Elwood street. WORLD SERIES SETS MANY RECORDS ball around in a random, offhand way and threw it blithely where they would. We've smiled in a tolerant, patronizing way upon cricket for years, yet here was a series between the best clubs in baseball, in which everybody got on, everybody hit, everybody ran, everybody scored; in brief, the sort of nightmare a man has in which he dreams of suspenders but not enough pants.

I am no statistician, this being one of my ill-bred boasts, and many years ago, after they had the bank examiners hurriedly in, they discovered that I was no bookkeeper, either. So the following merely represents a rough trial-balance on the records that resulted from the general orgy:

Twelve straight victories for the Yankees over the Pirates in 1927, the Cardinals in 1928 and the Cubs in 1932; 11 home runs, all told, tying a seven-game record in a four-game effort; 56 runs by both clubs in four days; 82 hits in the same time; 18 runs in yesterday's game; the equaling of an old record with the 13 runs scored by the Yankees; their new record of 36 runs in one series.

NOTHING SACRED

In other words, absolute anarchy ruled and nothing was sacred. The thing even wound up, for the first time in history, with no real star, but with any number of knaves. Gehrig was consistently good from first to last and Stephenson was at least one Cub the Yankee pitchers couldn't throttle. But theirs was not a headline performance. They simply happened to be a couple of ball players who could not be identified with the general disorder.

Those who could be were many. Charley Grimm made his share of technical mistakes in the field. The playing of Herman and Jurges was often a source of disquiet and unease on the Cub bench. The team, as a whole, was inclined to sudden flights of disorganization, hardly a helpful situation for its pitchers to face. However, the pitchers, from Bush on down to the lowliest understudy, were incapable of helping themselves. They, of all contributors to Chicago's defeat, were the most flagrant. They, in fact, represented the main difference between the clubs. They just couldn't stop the Yankee hitting.

YANK PITCHERS FAIR

Otherwise there wasn't as great a choice between the two as the result seemed to indicate. Yankee pitching merely got by. It didn't have to be good with the runs piling up like so many unpaid bills on the first of the month.

But, even so, there were moments, particularly yesterday, when it seemed that the Cubs might win a game in spite of their vast frustration. Sewell couldn't seem to come up with anything at third base. Crosetti made two great plays, but surrounded them with a rank error in one pinch and, in another, the weirdest throw ever beheld by the eye of man. He seems to be one of those tragedies of baseball—an uncertain shortstop who cannot hit.

Altogether, it was a series that will be remembered largely for its farcicalities and the fact that even the winner lost caste and prestige. In fact, its only recommendation was its merciful brevity.

CUBS HAVE HAD PLENTY OF YANKS, RING LEARNS

Want to Train Far Away From Their Series Foes

By RING LARDNER

(Reviewing the final game by radio)

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Chicago played the prank of its life by scheduling a world's series game yesterday against the Yankees, when it is a well known fact that Sundays are usually skipped in a big event like this.

Ring Lardner

The Yankees were figuring that Lou Gehrig and the rest of the boys would be permitted to lie abed without bats on their shoulders, but when it came to game time, the umps cried play ball, and forced poor Columbia Lou and his mates to shoulder their heavy bits of ash and carry on, as we used to say in the war.

(As who used to say in what war?)

But manager Grimm went further. Instead of playing this game in Cicero, Al Capone's old stamping ground, they decided to put it on where Saturday's game was played, making it even easier for the umpires to judge whether a ball was hit over or under the fence, as they have no fences in Cicero, now that Mr. Capone is gone.

CUBS WANT DISTANCE

Before the game there was a conference between Col. Ruppert, of the Yanks, and Maj. Bill Veeck, of the Cubs, at which it was agreed that the latter would train next spring at Catalina and the former at St. Petersburg. Mr. Veeck would not agree to any greater proximity.

"Mr. Grimes and I have seen enough of the boys for at least a year," said Mr. Veeck. "Can't you find a spot in Bermuda?"

Col. Ruppert explained that he had contracted for the Florila camp for one more season. Maj. Veeck was about to sock him when older heads intervened and socked each other.

This game was played on the edge of Lake Superior, one of the Great Lakes. It was the consensus among National Leaguers that no further world's series should be played near fresh or salt waters.

MUCH PITCHING TALENT

Before the game started it was easy to tell who was going to pitch. For the Yankees, Allen, Brown, Ruffing and Gomez warmed up. This left Pennock, Chesbro, Russell, Ford and Caldwell cold. The Cubs had Brown, Overall, Pfiester, Reulbach, Root, Malone, May, Tinning, Warneke and Big Ed Walsh on the firing line. Managers Grimm and McCarthy decided to let the umpires decide.

A fresh breeze blew off Buzzard's Bay, making it too hot for the umpires, but too warm for the players. The spectators were uncomfortable and the baseball writers were hoping it was nearly over.

In batting practice Babe Ruth and Gehrig sprung a surprise by hitting from the left side of the plate. Columbia Babe swung as if he had always been a lefty-hander. Columbia Lou acted a little awkward at first, but soon got into the swing of it and was hitting them as far as the shortstop.

HOW THEY BATTED!

Columbia Tony Lazzeri turned around and batted left-handed to make it even. Columbia Earle Combs and Columbia Joey Sewell began hitting from both sides of the plate on orders from Judge Kenesaw Mt. Landis. Columbia Bill Dickey practiced swinging from the middle.

Instead of "Star Spangled Banner," Kate Smith got up before the opening of the game and sang "When the Moan Comes Over the Mountain," in honor of Judge Landis.

The churches were full just before luncheon time, and the street cars right afterward. The ball park started filling up slowly, like a glass of Pilsener. There were cheers for Columbia Riggs Stephenson, Columbia Kiki Cuyler, Columbia Gabby Hartnett, Columbia Guy Bush and Columbia the Gem of the Ocean.

And in spite of the fact that they were hostile, there were also cheers for Columbia Crosetti, Columbia Herb Pennock and Columbia Jurges.

An amazing part of the program occurred when the crowd arose and gave a cheer for the four umpires, Columbia Bill Klem, Columbia Bill Dineen, Columbia Van Grafian and Columbia Magerkurth. Just before the game started the entire crowd gave a cheer for Columbia Judge Landis.

THEY PRACTICE BOOTING

At sharply 1:30, Capt. Woody English dashed on the field and led his team through a light signal practice. Jurges and Hartnett loosened up their kicking legs with some high spirals. Herman tried a few place kicks from various distances against the wind. Capt. Ruth brought his men on the field a few seconds later. He and his men looked heavier than their opponents, who looked lighter.

Capts. English and Ruth met in the middle of the field, and Referee Klem tossed a five dollar bill in the air and it blew away. He borrowed another from Columbia Bill Dinneen and tossed it up. Capt. English caught it and chose third base, with a slight wind behind him. It gave him the choice of pitchers. The band played the Navy song, in honor of the navy. It was the Cubs' kickoff, and Capt. English politely allowed the Yanks to bat first.

FIRST INNING (YANKS)

There was a conference between the rival captains to decide whether any one of German or Italian descent should be permitted to play. It wound up in a brawl. The wind is still blowing. Guy Bush seems in a hurry to get home. The first two boys hit safely, and Columbia Babe gets hit in the arm, filling the bases. Columbia Lou brings in a touchdown with a long fly to Demaree. Coach Grimm decides to punt. Mr. Bush has decided that he has seen enough of this series. Schmeling's round.

FIRST INNING (CUBS)

The boys get out in the middle of the gridiron and continue their argument about what nationalities ought to be allowed in these games. No one thought of a man of French descent. The first period is over and the elevens have changed goals. The wind has changed.

SECOND INNING (YANKS)

SECOND INNING (CUBS)

Herman went between tackle and guard for two yards. English tried a spinner and got a yard. Cuyler punted. The boys are still arguing.

THIRD INNING (YANKS)

Let's allow the broadcasters to tell what happened. At least, we know that the Cubs are a touchdown to the good.

THIRD INNING (CUBS)

THE NEXT FEW INNINGS

Columbia Graham McNamee and Riggs Stephenson were both out of bounds. The plays were called back and played over. Opposed to a big, heavy Amherst team that offered little resistance, Princeton made its debut under its new middle western coaching regime with a clear-cut victory in Palmer Stadium.

South Carolina upsets Villa Nova.

Yale tied by Bates.

The next few innings.

Columbia Lou now leads again by a touchdown. Columbia Charley Grimm and Columbia Gabby Hartnett have tied the score at two touchdowns. Columbia Joey Sewell went into a huddle. Columbia Babe Ruth also huddled to the same effect.

Columbia Lou Gehrig huddled. It was a disastrous huddle. The Columbia Cubs then began to huddle.

Columbia Herb Pennock was put in by Columbia Joe McCarthy. The Columbia Yankees are now leading by a Columbia 9 to 5.

Columbia Earl Combs went into a huddle and hit a home run into the right field seats for a home run. It is getting pretty dark, so they can huddle without hiding. Tony Lazzeri went into a Columbia huddle and hit one into the seats for another home run. All the rest is huddles. Bill Dickey went into a Columbia huddle.

The ninth inning started with a Columbia huddle. The score is now, Columbia 13 to 5 in a huddle. After this all the Cubs need is six or seven runs and a Columbia huddle.

Truth in Diplomacy Urged by Herriot

VESOUL, France, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Premier Edouard Herriot, speaking at a banquet in honor of Senate President Jules Jeanneney, urged both vigilance and courage in the foreign policy of France. He said:

"One must not flatter the people, but tell them the truth. Let us have an understanding with other peoples, but a loyal understanding, face to face."

INNER MISSION REPORT FILED

Statistics compiled by the Rev. Dr. George L. Kieffer, of New York City, in the 1933 year book of the United Lutheran Church in America, shows the Lutheran Inner Mission Society of Pittsburgh expends nearly $400,000 yearly on religious welfare work and social service.

The Pittsburgh Synod maintains the Home and Farm School at Zelienople and the Bethesda home at Meadville. The Passavant Hospital is a Lutheran institution. Other Inner Mission institutions in the territory of the Pittsburgh Synod are the Lutheran Home for the Aged at Erie, the Old People's Home at Zelienople and the Passavant Memorial Home for Epileptics, Rochester.

At a convention of the United Lutheran Church in Philadelphia October 12, the Inner Mission Board will urge a definite program of congregational social welfare activity including family relief, unemployment assistance, the handling of family problems, broken homes and care of orphans as bases for local church attacks upon social problems, according to the Rev. Dr. C. E. Krumbholz, superintendent of the Pittsburgh Inner Mission Society.

Oriental Rugs

If you are looking for a special size or a rug of unusual proportions, you will find it here—large rugs, small rugs, and runners.

The prices in many instances, are lower than those of the better grade, so-called "American Orientals," which are machine-made reproductions of these hand-woven originals.

Oriental rugs at these prices are a genuine investment. They are objects of great beauty as well as utility. A good Oriental rug, with reasonable care, will often serve several generations.

Our Oriental Rug Chief, veteran of unnumbered buying expeditions to the Far East, assures us that, in all his 37 years' experience, he has never known Oriental rugs at these prices. So history will be made here this week, and people are certain to rush to possess these beautiful, hand-woven, long-lasting, room-size carpets, at prices which in all probability will never be seen again. Above everything else they are typical Horne selections, and the pieces were chosen with the same care and taste as when we paid four and five times as much for the same qualities. They represent varying costs, but we've grouped the greater part at six round figures for quick and enthusiastic action.

Some folks like to stroll about at races, others get just as near to the course as possible, and others always watch from their cars, parked near the finishing line.

Quite a few of the fashionables are reserving space for parking at the Columbus Day races to be run a week from Wednesday over Huntlands, the George R. McNary farm near Greensburg.

The starter for the races will be Chandler Wells, of Buffalo, N. Y., who's a leading figure in the Geneseo Valley Hunt Club.

FUR-LIKE VELVETS MEET FABRIC REQUIREMENTS OF NEW LINES

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—There are literally hundreds of new kinds of velvets this year. French fabric manufacturers, realizing that the new, simpler lines of women's clothes would naturally demand more attention to fabric textures, have outdone themselves this year in making soft, silky weaves that are far removed from the old familiar velvets of a few seasons ago.

* * *

MANY OF THE new velvets are furry and are intended to look like furs—even though they're dyed pale pinks and blues and other pastel tints. These are the velvets that are used for evening wraps, all the way from the tiny shoulder capes designed to be worn in restaurants and theaters to long full coats that cover the hem of one's dress.

* * *

OTHERS ARE woven in a new manner to give a dull surface. They look more like old-fashioned duvetyn than velvet, yet are soft and light enough to be used for the most delicate evening gowns. There is a whole series of new corduroy velvets—some heavy and sturdy, for sports suits; others sheer and soft, for evening clothes.

* * *

STRIPED VELVETS come in for a lot of attention among afternoon and dinner dresses. Because of their lustrous silkiness they may be draped into the soft cowl necklines that are becoming to almost everyone; and with their striped patterns, they are usually vivid with color. Note how simply the Heim dinner dress is made, with its wide-shouldered line and high decolletage; the skirt hangs straight except when some movement brings the concealed godets into view.

* * *

THERE IS even more severity of line in the white velvet dress with its fur-edged neckline, from Patou.

Happiness Waits for Those Willing to Earn It

Must Bubbles "Always Suffer"?

Will no man ever really love her, because she's been wild and wooly and done things she shouldn't?

Folks tell her she must, and he won't. But Bubbles, while admitting her life is ruined, has an excuse.

"I am so unhappy!" she moans. "I always have been, I guess that's why I'm no good!"

And what do you think of that notion? Is being unhappy a good excuse for going off the deep end and making a tramp of yourself?

"Dearest Sally:

"Please help me, won't you? Need a few kind words and a little encouragement from somebody, and I don't know anyone else to go to. You have helped so many people that I think maybe you can do something for me, too.

"I am so unhappy! It seems to me that unhappiness is all there is in my life!

"That's why I am no good. And now I suppose I have to pay for being that way.

"This is my trouble. I am in love with a wonderful fellow, but he can't love me because men only love 'good' girls, and he happens to know all about my past, which is no good at all. So you see how it is.

DISCOURAGING ANSWERS

"I have asked various people if a man could love a girl who did what I have done, and their answer has always been 'No man can really love a girl like you.' It's so discouraging! Is it true?

"Must I go through life unloved because of the things I have done? People probably think I couldn't be true to any one man after the way I have played around, but I could. I know I could.

"Isn't it possible for any man to love me?"

"Must I always suffer?

"Please help me, and tell me what you think. I am so unhappy and discouraged.

"BUBBLES."

Will no man ever love you? Must you "always suffer?"

That's up to you kid! Maybe people are right when they tell you that no man would or could love the girl you are now. But why stay that kind of a girl? There is no reason on earth why some decent honest man shouldn't love the girl you can become.

CAN WIN RESPECT

So look yourself over, weed out the trash in you and get going. Stop expecting happiness to just fall in your lap, and getting peeved because it doesn't. If you want it, earn it!

"You're not in this jam because you got bad breaks. You're in it because you've been wobbly and wishy-washy; because you've slumped and drifted. You wanted happiness handed to you, gratis. And when it wasn't you went out and two-timed yourself.

Now you wish you could duck the consequences. You can't. But you can fight your way through them. You can fight your way back to brightness and cleanness if you honestly want to, and if you have the sense and spunk to do it.

You can make folks respect you and believe in you, if you'll believe in yourself and prove to them that you've learned how to be regular.

So cut out the moping and feeling sorry for yourself, and begin to build up a new woman. And some day, when you've done that, you'll find fine, real love, waiting for you.

Porter Yelled "Fire!," But It Was Only Steam, Fay King Recalls

THAT CERTAINLY IS A FIRE!
LOOKS LIKE A FIRE!
FIRE!
Fay King
DING DONG
WOOF
HERE WE ARE!
ALL ABOARD
THE FIRE ENGINES ARRIVED AND ALL THE DOGS IN TOWN WERE HELPING WITH THE FIRE HOSE!

By FAY KING

I'll never forget it!

Our train had just stopped in a small town. Main street was on one side, on the other a large wooden building. From this the passengers saw smoke rising.

"It's a fire!" we agreed excitedly, and urged our porter, an obliging man, to rush to the train steps and shout—"FIRE!"

His mighty voice brought the entire population and the fire department pronto!

The fire hose was unfurled, and with a dozen dogs helping in canine glee, it was dragged to the tracks.

Fortunately at this point our train pulled out—and saved us from a drenching!

For what we thought was smoke was only steam.

What the town thought was that the train was in flames.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Sinusitis a Frequent Cause of More Serious Ailment

Most persons have heard a lot about "sinusitis." Either they have suffered from the disease or know others who are chronic sufferers. Sinusitis, as the word implies, is an inflammation of the nasal sinuses.

Dr. Copeland

The nasal sinuses are a group of air cells or spaces in the bones close to the nose. Each nostril has a set of sinuses which open into the nose.

There are four groups or pairs of sinuses. Each bears the name of the bone enclosing it. The frontal sinus is located in the frontal bone, behind the eyebrow and above the ridge of the nose. The maxillary sinus, or antrum, is located in the maxillary bone, which lies below the eye, under the cheek and above the teeth.

The ethmodial sinuses are made up of several cells or cavities. They are arranged in a honeycomb fashion. Each of these sinuses is located between the nasal cavity and the eye socket.

Behind and at the top of the nose is a heavy bone which forms a part of the base of the skull. This is the sphenoid bone and in it is located the sphenoidal sinus.

The nasal sinuses are in reality continuations of the nasal cavities. They are lined with mucous membrane continuous with the lining of the nose.

Air is carried to the sinuses as it is taken in through the nose. The hollow spaces or sinuses make the bones of the face lighter and stronger. They have a part in protecting the tissues of the nose from sudden changes of temperature.

Unfortunately, the sinuses are a frequent source of infection. It is readily seen how a cold or infection involving the nose or its membranes quickly spreads to the sinuses. Common colds, influenza and grippe, as well as acute fevers of childhood, are frequently complicated by sinus infection.

When the infection is persistent and pus accumulates, the health and welfare of the body are greatly impaired. Due to the impaired drainage of the sinuses, the pus cannot escape, but becomes absorbed into the system.

This frequent source of body poisoning is the underlying cause of many serious and disturbing ailments. Arthritis, rheumatism, hay fever, asthma, heart disturbances, headaches, high blood pressure and nervousness are often traced to centers of infection in the sinuses.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Why won't the little dollies learn that the thin, almost hairless, eyebrow is a beauty back number? No need of tolerating wild hairs that are on the outskirts of the eyebrow proper, but to weed the growth down to a line that resembles a shred of darning cotton gives the face a vacuous, vapid appearance, lacking in color contrast and expression.

Never should the complexion show up a heavy powdery appearance. Instead there should be the light dull finish, powder perfectly distributed, surplus removed with a camel's hair complexion brush. Neck and ears are entitled to their share. Ears are prettier when the lobes are rouged. The shade of the powder should be slightly darker than the skin.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

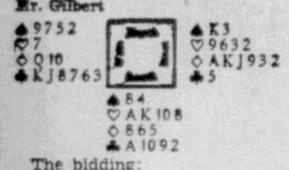
By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

A Hero by Accident

"Heroes," remarks Mr. John Charles Gilbert, "are sometimes made by accident as well as by design," and in proof of his contention he submitted to me the hand below, which he designates as the prize "heartbreak hand."

East—Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
			1 ◇
1 ♡	2 ♣	2 ♠	3 ◇
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

The bidding by North and South was not unduly optimistic. There is a perfect fit in hearts and a prospect that the losers may be limited to two diamonds and one club, provided the spade finesse works or a situation is created whereby the opposing club trick cannot be cashed. The Opening lead was the diamond Queen, which East permitted to hold. As a matter of fact, this was a very serious blunder by the East player and should have cost him the contract.

The correct defensive play at this point was to have taken the diamond trick and returned the club immediately, and East should have been alert to see the danger of any other course of play.

West continued with the second round of diamonds, which East won, and returned his singleton club. The Declarer, correctly reading the distribution of the diamond suit, feared that the club five was a singleton. He went on with the Ace, planning to pin his hopes of success on a successful finesse in spades, or, failing that, he had the alternative of forcing East, after trumps were drawn, to lead a diamond, thus giving him a ruff and a discard.

After winning with the Ace of clubs, South led his last diamond and West decided to ruff with his useless trump, thus forcing an honor from the Dummy hand. South returned to his own hand with a trump, only to find that East had held four trumps originally and that it would be necessary to draw all the trumps to avoid the possibility of ruffs in the spade suit. However, as a spade finesse was necessary to his success, he now led a small spade, playing the Ten from Dummy. Here Mr. Gilbert's partner made the play which nominated him for the hero class. He played the spade 3. Everything appeared satisfactory, so far as the Declarer was concerned. Seemingly the safety of the spade finesse was assured, so he proceeded to draw East's three remaining trumps, and at the tenth trick led the 8 of spades, finessing the Knave, which was won by East's King, who then laid down three good diamonds and defeated the contract five hundred points.

"Beautiful play, partner," was West's enthusiastic comment.

East, however, was honest.

"It was a mistake," he admitted. "I drew the wrong card, and it was only when the Declarer began to draw the trumps that I realized the situation which had thus been created."

In any event, it is better to be a hero, even by accident, than never to rise to the heights of greatness.

TODAY'S QUESTION:

What does an Opening lead of a Queen signify? Does it show the King?

Answer: The lead of a Queen indicates that the Knave of the suit is held, but denies the King. It should be led from combinations such as Q J 10 8 or Q J 9 2.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

At a Hotel

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Should one ever use the word Dr., Miss or Mrs. on a check (blank check)?

2—How should an unmarried girl register at a hotel? I mean a girl over 21.

3—How should she register if she is with her mother?

4—How should she register if she is with a married sister?

P.

1—No. We do not, or should not, use the title with the name as we make out a check. And, in the same way, we should not use the title before our name as we sign a check.

2—When she registers at a hotel, the unmarried girl or woman uses her formal name, that is the name with her title, as her name, for instance, appears on her visiting card. Like this:

Miss Mary Graham, Los Angeles.

3—First her mother registers, and then she registers:

Mrs. Arthur Graham, Los Angeles.

Miss Mary Graham, Los Angeles.

4—The married sister registers first, and then the unmarried girl:

Mrs. Walter Andrews, San Francisco.

Miss Mary Graham, Los Angeles.

5—One sister may register for all, or each may register for herself. The form of the name is the name for each, as I have indicated in the foregoing answers.

Who and Whom

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Please notify me about the pupils who, she thinks, should be furnished free books?

2. Please notify me about the pupils whom, she thinks, should be furnished free books?

Is the word who or whom correct?

In this sentence, who is correct. "Please notify me about the pupils, who, she thinks, should be furnished free books."

Who is the subject of the clause "who should be furnished free books." Therefore, it should be in the nominative case.

In this kind of sentence, with the "she thinks" interrupting the clause, it is often difficult to figure out whether who should be used as the subject of the interrupted clause, or whom as the object of the verb of the clause. But if you train yourself automatically to leave out the interrupting words, you will see the correct construction of the relative pronoun.

SUCCOP APPEAL DELAY LIKELY

A delay in the appeal of Bertram L. Succop, former city supplies director, found guilty of 29 counts of misdemeanor in office, will be asked by his own counsel in Superior Court, according to well informed sources. Succop has appealed from a sentence of one year in jail.

The hearing before Superior Court had been set for October 17, but it is now believed that the appeal will not be heard before November because of the large amount of testimony involved.

So far as can be learned, no change is contemplated in the date for the prosecution's appeal on the decision of Judge Thomas D. Finletter, which threw out the verdict against Mayor Charles H. Kline. It will be heard October 17.

HOLIDAYS END IN YOM KIPPUR

With Rosh Hashanah, or Jewish New Year ended at sundown yesterday, the season of religious observance continues with a week of penitence culminating in Yom Kippur, the day of atonement, next Monday.

From sunset of October 9 until sunset of the 10th the devout Jew devotes himself to fasting and prayer, these taking the place of the priestly sacrifices of ancient Israel.

One of the features of Yom Kippur is a memorial service in which worshippers think of those who have departed, the great and the good who have served humanity.

800 SEEK JOBS OPEN TO FOUR

At 8 a. m. today, 800 men and women packed the streets outside the Keystone Box Company plant at Twenty-eighth and Smallman streets in answer to an advertisement of jobs for four.

About the same time 150 girls crowded the doors of the new W. T. Grant store at Market street and Liberty avenue looking for jobs. Because of a misunderstanding as to when new employes would be added, none was hired.

At the Strip plant the four successful applicants were chosen early. The others departed.

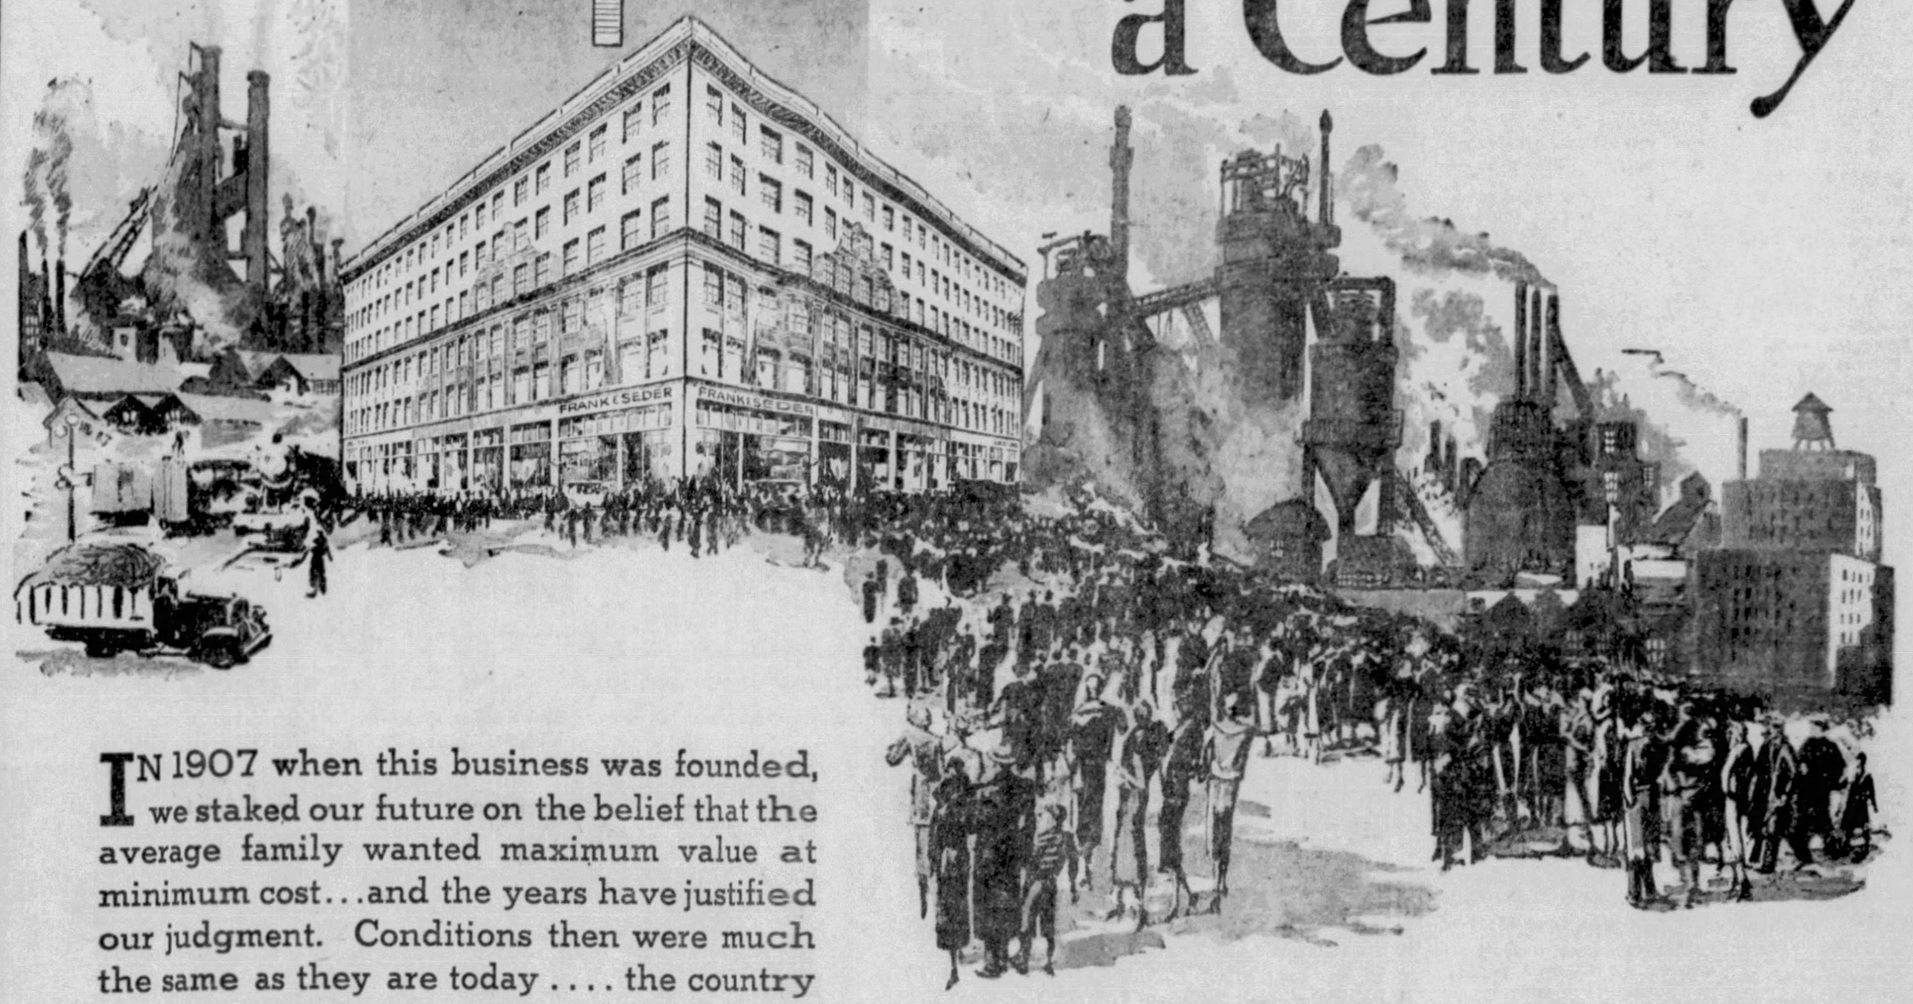
Serving Pittsburgh for a Quarter of a Century



IN 1907 when this business was founded, we staked our future on the belief that the average family wanted maximum value at minimum cost...and the years have justified our judgment. Conditions then were much the same as they are today .... the country had been prosperous and the people extravagant in their spending .... Then came the panic, with its sobering consequences, and the inevitable retrenchment .... The public was ready for a store that would sell style and quality merchandise at economical prices .... That need we tried to fill .... In order to sell for less, we had to buy for less, and to give our customers the full benefit of every dollar we saved .... It was necessary, too, in order to keep prices down, to keep expenses down .... so that we could not afford those frills and furbelows, and extravagant surroundings that add considerably to the cost of doing business, and which must be reflected in higher prices to the public .... For twenty-five years we have pursued this policy .... and it has enabled us, thanks to the generous and loyal support of this great community, to develop from the small shop of 1907 to this present representative department store of 1932.

On an occasion such as this, it is difficult to express our feelings in words... All that we have, all that we are, we owe to the people of Pittsburgh ... We have served you for a quarter of a century, and at this time, we re-dedicate ourselves to your service ... It will be our continued objective to deal with you fairly, to serve you well, and to share with you all the benefits that accrue to us from our merchandising operations ... to the end that we may promote your economic welfare, and maintain that bond of goodwill and friendship which has united us so closely during these twenty-five years .....

BEGINS WEDNESDAY

To fittingly celebrate our 25 Years of Progress and to show our appreciation to this community, we will offer

'Willow Tree,' First Cadman Opera Written for Radio, WCAE Feature Tonight

The world premiere of Charles Wakefield Cadman's "The Willow Tree," a one-act opera written especially for radio presentation, is broadcast over nation-wide NB-WEAF networks, including WCAE, tonight at 10:30 o'clock. The composer himself speaks from Chicago as a highlight of the program, the musical portion of which originates in New York.

Mr. Cadman

The leading roles in the opera are sung by Muriel Wilson, soprano; Veronica Wiggins, contralto; Fred Hufsmith, tenor, and Theodore Webb, baritone. "The Willow Tree" is Cadman's first attempt at writing opera for radio. The libretto is the work of Nelle Richmond Eberhart. Cadman was born and reared in Johnstown, Pa., and received his musical education in Pittsburgh. He formerly was music critic for a Pittsburgh newspaper and his first published compositions were issued in 1904.

Inaugurating a nightly series of radio programs over NBC networks, the Republican National Committee offers addresses on WCAE tonight at 10 by Bruce Barton, writer and advertising executive; William Allen White, Kansas publisher, and E. F. Hutton, financier. The new evening series is being put on the air in addition to the regular daily afternoon Republican programs.

Program Pointers

Completing its tour of the country, the Parade of States pays tribute to Montana, with John Fogarty as guest artist, on WCAE at 9:30 tonight. A special symphonic arrangement of "The Battle of Little Big Horn," describing the last stand of Gen. Custer, is played by a concert orchestra under the direction of Erno Rapee . . . The fall edition of the "Contented Hour," featuring a 30-piece concert orchestra under the baton of Morgan L. Eastman and a male quartet with Cyril Pitts, tenor, and Reinhold Schmidt, basso, as soloists, makes its bow on KDKA at 8 o'clock. Jean Paul King again is scheduled as master of ceremonies, and Gene Arnold is the narrator.

John Fogarty

Homer Rodeheaver, song leader with Billy Sunday 20 years ago, presents a half-hour song recital on WWSW tomorrow at 2 p. m. Rodeheaver has been heard frequently on NBC and CBS chains during Cadman's hour and the Church of the Air presentations.

A new series of nightly weather reports specially designed to warn radio-equipped motorists of weather changes likely to affect the operation of their automobiles opens on WCAE tonight at 7:14.

"Season Changes," the first of the fall and winter Carnegie Museum educational talks, by Dr. O. E. Jennings, director of educational work and curator of botany at the museum, is scheduled on WCAE at 6:45.

The Three X Sisters, new harmonizers who recently arrived from London, are starred in a new program on WJAS at 7:30 tonight.

A program consisting entirely of compositions of Pittsburghers is offered by the WCAE String Ensemble under the direction of Ralph Federer tonight at 8. Federer's own song, "One Little Hour," is included.

LISTENING IN

Personal Notes About Artists on the Air.

Bits about the artists: Harriet Lee, the blonde singing star of NBC networks, is making personal appearances in New York and adjacent cities . . . the Rollickers Quartet also is listed for vaude . . . Reggie Bybeth, saxophonist with Harold Stokes' orchestra, had to swim three miles against the waves once after his sailboat had turned on its side . . . Edward Davies, the baritone, has six Boston bull puppies. One's name is "Schnozzle" . . . Mary Steele, Chicago NBC soprano, goes in for walking in a big way—three or four miles each day. Her hikes usually end up with a tour of the zoo . . . And Josef Koestner has a new hobby—horseshoe pitching.

Miss Lee

Robert Simmons, after a sudden call for rehearsal at the NBC studios in New York, ought to qualify as an automobile racing driver. He made the 66-mile trip from his Cornwall, N. Y., home in an hour and 24 minutes.

More bits: Harold Sanford is a direct descendant of William Cullen Bryant, the poet . . . Theodore Webb has been singing on the air ever since the days when WJZ operated in Newark, N. J. . . . Phillips Lord used to work in a New York candy factory . . . Johnny Hart made his stage debut in Arthur Hopkins' production of "What Price Glory" . . . B. A. Rolfe was playing a piccolo when he was six years old . . . Ethel Shutta (Mrs. George Olsen) first met the band leader during rehearsals for Ziegfeld's "Sally" . . . Tom Corwine, the animal imitator, started to practice his lion roars in the corridor of the Chicago NBC offices the other day and sent everyone scurring for safety. What a lot of fun he could have.

The Mills Brothers are John, Harry, Herbert and Don . . . and their ages, 23, 21, 20 and 18 respectively.

Johnny Marvin plans to compile a book of yodel songs—the first of its kind ever to be published—to be called "Frankie and Johnny Marvin's Yodel Book" . . . Frankie, Johnny's brother, is co-author of many of the songs. He's on the air in Chicago.

When it was announced that the Boswell Sisters were going to take a two-weeks' vacation, fans responded with 19 handbags and valises, three trunks, five boudoir mirror, comb and brush sets, lots of books and three Bibles . . . superstitious fans sent more than 50 "good luck" charms to the girls.

The "Carnegie Tartan," official weekly publication of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, makes its bow to the radio audience via "Campus Notes" on WWSW at 5:45.

Man 'Photographs' Radio Singer's Voice

MEDICAL GROUP TO CONDEMN STATE RULE

Sumptuary legislation being proposed to regulate the medical profession is condemned in a resolution expected to be presented late today before the house of delegates of the Medical Association of the State of Pennsylvania, meeting in convention at the William Penn Hotel.

Admitting possible justification for some action, the resolution, prepared by the Chester County Medical Society terms it "a destructive procedure directed against the profession which is best qualified to suggest the provisions of any laws."

LEADERSHIP URGED

Urging the profession to assume leadership in this control, the resolution reads:

"The contest which must eventually come will be against the controlling interest of so-called welfare workers, industrial and insurance magnates who are combining in a stupendous merger for the control and manipulation of all medical service."

Over-supply of physicians is another matter to be discussed. A committee report, citing there is one physician for each 780 of population, urges a control measure.

TO INSTALL PRESIDENT

Installation of Dr. Charles Falkowsky, Jr., of Scranton, as president will feature the formal opening tomorrow of the four-day convention.

The public will be invited to participate in an open meeting Wednesday night, featuring Pennsylvania Health day, beginning at 7:45 o'clock in Pirate Hall of the hotel.

The program, arranged especially for the layman, will include addresses by Dr. T. B. Appel, State Secretary of Health, Dr. T. B. Carroll, president, Allegheny County Medical Society; and Dr. R. Adams Dutcher, State College. Motion pictures will illustrate health points.

A general convention session will be held daily with sections meetings in the afternoons. Leading national authorities, who will discuss problems, include Dr. Albert H. Freiberg, Cincinnati; Dr. Frank H. Lahey, Boston; Dr Russell L. Cecil, Cornell University; Dr. George E. Brown, Mayo Foundation; Dr. Thomas M. Rovers, Rockefeller Institute; Dr. John F. Erdmann, Columbia University.

EVANGELICAL RALLY PLANNED

The fall rally of the Federation of Evangelical Women of Pittsburgh will open a 2:30 p. m., Wednesday afternoon, in the Trinity Evangelical Church, Dorseyville. Mrs. Milton Lang, missionary in the Central Provinces, India, will recount some of her experiences.

Sister Bena Puc of the Deaconess Hospital of the Evangelical Synod, St. Louis, will be installed as matron of the Evangelical Home for the Aged, Dorseyville, at the evening session.

Mrs. H. Dunker is president of the Pittsburgh Federation; Mrs H. Moelser vice-president; Miss Hilda Redeker, secretary; Mrs. William Richter, treasurer; Miss Olga Hurdt, finance secretary and Mrs. William Grimpe, publicity chairman.

One More Chance To Register for Election

Residents of cities in Allegheny County who have been assessed, still have one chance to qualify in order to vote at the November election.

October 8 will be the third and last registration day in the cities. This is also the last day to pay poll taxes. Only those regularly assessed can pay taxes.

September 7 was the last day to be assessed.

PLAN WELCOME FOR HILL FOLK

To complete plans for entertaining the people of the Allegheny Mountain tablelands when they visit Pittsburgh October 13 to 15, a meeting has been called this week of the various committees of the tableland conference of the Chamber of Commerce by Chairman Joseph T. Miller.

An exhibit of the products of the mountain farms will be displayed at Gimbels, and already entry applications have been received from all parts of the mountain district.

The Chamber of Commerce has planned an automobile tour for visitors October 13; and October 14 a banquet.

Free entertainment, including a stage show, will be furnished by the radio stations of Pittsburgh. The tableland guests are to be extended the privilege of free parking in the city parking lots.

Baby in Basket Left on Doorstep

ALTOONA, Pa., Oct. 3.—A baby boy, between two and three weeks old, found in a chip basket on the door steps of a home in Hollidaysburg, was brought to Mercy Hospital, this city, where it will be taken care of. The child is in good health, but there was no way of tracing the parentage.

COUNTY RELIEF LEADERS SEEK ADDITIONAL R. F. C. FUNDS

FUGITIVE SHOT IN PISTOL DUEL HERE

Railroad Detectives Battle Escaped Prisoner

James Condo, 23, of Jamestown, N. Y., an escaped prisoner, wanted for shooting at school children in Westmoreland County, was in Homeopathic Hospital today, the loser in a gun battle with Baltimore and Ohio Railroad detectives, police said.

A bullet tore through his shoulder in the battle between him and Lieut. F. J. Hicks, near the railroad tracks at Panther Hollow Lake, Schenley Park, last night.

Condo, arrested two days ago by Hicks and Detective L. A. Peters, escaped from the officers when he was entering the county jail here.

The officers found Condo and Andrew King, of Newbury, O., in the bushes near the lake last night and arrested them. After searching and handcuffing them, the officers were amazed by Condo's command:

"Keep them high above your head."

Surprised, the officers complied. When the pair leaped on a moving freight train, Hicks opened fire, and was answered by a volley from Condo, police said. Condo, hit, fell from the rear of the train. King, arrested, was held over in Oakland Police Court today.

Harry Marks, 28, of 2810 Larkins way, was in the South Side Hospital today with a fractured skull, an injury for which he was formerly attended there, later being returned to South Side police station, according to a police report.

Marks was taken to the hospital Saturday night when a policeman found him unconscious. Several hours after he had been returned to the police station he collapsed in a cell. He was returned to the hospital and was reported suffering from a fractured skull.

Thomas Conley, 36, of 2261 Alomont street, with whom Marks was reported fighting when he was injured, was held for investigation at a hearing in South Side Police Station today. Conley said he tried to assist Marks from the street where he had fallen while intoxicated.

Man Tries Twice To Visit Father, Beaten, Robbed

Felix Sienec, 22, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., will think twice before he visits his father, Julian Sienec, of Creighton Road Hollow, again.

On a recent trip, Sienec was beaten and robbed of a small amount of money, and his automobile was stripped. Early yesterday he found himself in the Citizens General Hospital, New Kensington, again. He had been overpowered and beaten. After head and shoulder bruises were dressed, he joined East Deer Township police in a search for the holdup men. Both robberies took place on the Creighton Hollow road, near his father's home.

Orphanage Loses Butler Tax Fight

BUTLER, Pa., Oct. 3. — The United Presbyterian Women's Association of North America, which conducts a home for orphans near Mars, must pay tax on the 237 acres comprising the home farm, according to Judge Thomas W. Watson, of the Butler County Court.

Managers of the home, formerly located in the North Side, Pittsburgh, contended that the land, used for welfare purposes, should not be taxed. Eighteen acres, including buildings used by the home, have not been assessed for taxes.

HARRIS GROUP WILL APPEAL TO STATE

Move For Restoration Of $90,000 Taken From U. S. Aid

To offset a shortage in county relief funds due to the $90,000 reduction of its allotment of Reconstruction Finance Corporation funds, Allegheny County relief leaders today planned to ask the state emergency board to allocate additional funds from the corporation's proposed second loan to Pennsylvania, according to Senator Frank J. Harris.

Senator Harris, county chairman of the Emergency Relief Committee, will meet his group today to draft plans for making the request. Announcement of the grant of a second loan of $5,000,000 to Pennsylvania by the R. F. C. was expected today.

Senator Harris was unable to say what amount the county would ask. It is probable that he will ask for an additional $90,000 to coincide with the reduction effected by Gov. Pinchot's allocation from funds from the first loan among 12 counties.

The county's request, it was said, may be for less than the $90,000 inasmuch as the Allegheny County Poor Board may see fit to lend assistance with borrowed funds.

G. O. P. Skillful At Fine Art of Rubber Stamp

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

The Republican campaign orators are like a football team leaving a huddle. They all gallop out with the same signals.

We have read and listened to the G. O. P. campaign speakers, and every one of Mrs. Brown's cows moos alike.

They dish up the same old stereotyped arguments with mimeograph sauce. It's too much like mamma sending Junior out with a list of groceries and saying:

"Now, don't forget what I sent you for."

But your Democratic stumper is a hoss in a different race. He not only warbles his party platform, but he has ideas of his own. He knows that 12 years of political sawdust has the public all guffed up.

Styles change in everything. We don't see any more ventriloquists in vaudeville, and we don't want to listen to their dolls in the political struggle.

We admit that the Republican soft-boiled oratory worked four years ago, but so did our pocket lighter.

THEFT SUSPECT WOUNDED

Richard Gallagher, 23, of Spring Garden avenue, was reported in a serious condition in Homeopathic Hospital from a bullet wound inflicted by a watchman of the Sharpsburg Contracting Company early yesterday, according to police.

The watchman, Elmer Haerich, told police he shot Gallagher when he and the latter's alleged companion, Louis Reck, of Nebel's Hill, fired on him when he surprised them stealing gasoline.

Following the shooting, the pair escaped, but were captured later by county detectives after Gallagher's father had summoned an ambulance to his home, police said.

Coyne Lists Kin on Payroll, Wishes He Could Place More

Senator James J. Coyne is a jolly soul. He reigns over Oakland and other adjacent places benevolently, smoothing off his difficulties with wit, charm and charity, and sometimes with force.

He sat in his office in Oakland and reeled off the list of relatives he knew were on the payroll. He explained it something like this:

"Now, I have some ideas about nepotism. I have some Coynes on the payroll. Not all the Coynes. I'm not related to them all.

"There's my brother, Philip, the county paymaster. He started as a clerk, and when Bob Cain became county treasurer he was promoted to paymaster. It pays $300. Take Philip now. I'll bet you that no man can do the job better than Phillip. He's a smart lad and earned his promotion. Ask any real county employe about him. He'll tell you that I'm telling the truth."

The Senator's eyes twinkled. He went on:

"Now, there's my brother, Coleman. He's foreman over in the park—Schenley. That pays $200.

"Coleman, now, if you'd look up his record, is a pretty good workman. I wouldn't say he should be a clerk, or a paymaster like Philip because he's a workingman. But a better worker you'd have a hard time finding in all the county. Coleman works hard. Day in and day out, I'd match him with any fellow around to do a good day's work.

"Patrick, that's another brother, is a fireman. He's been on over 12 years. He started through civil service, and at a time when no one wanted to be a fireman. But he thought he'd like it, and he does. Peter, another brother, is a fireman, too. He got his job the same way, and I hear he likes it. A fireman gets $210.

"A little niece of mine, Margaret Toole, is a stenographer somewhere, I think the probation office. She got her own job and didn't bother about politics.

"The way I feel about it is my brothers went out and started their own families and it's their job to raise them. I have my own and I'll take care of them.

"Just now, when people need jobs, I have four children ready to go to work. I'll support them until times are better, but I think you newspaper fellows should help me get them jobs.

"But about this relative business, it's natural. I'll get one a job, and my friends, too, every chance I get."

The twinkle hadn't died down. His telephones were buzzing. He was asked if he had given the list complete:

"I may have forgotten some. "I'll give you a call if I can remember any others."

Until the call comes, the Coyne list stands:

Senator J. J. Coyne, $3,000 and $1,000 extra for special sessions; Philip, $3,600; Coleman, $2,400; Peter, $2,520; Patrick, $2,520; Miss Toole, $1,800. These salaries, on the yearly basis, do not include the deductions made by furlough or cut.

Burglar Suspect Held in Wilmerding

Alleged to have entered several dwellings in Colwell street, Wilmerding, George Hardin, 33, Negro, of Braddock avenue, East Pittsburgh, was held for court at a hearing before Justice of the Peace John T. Small at East McKeesport.

Hardin was arrested late Saturday following a chase by Police Chief Samuel Holden. Several shots were fired by police at the Negro during the chase.

2 Accused of Running Still On Farm, Fined

Two men, alleged to have been operators of a moonshine distillery on a farm near Hillview street, Overbrook, were fined $100 each by Magistrate John J. Sweeney in South Side Police Court yesterday. They are Charles Diamond, 1420 Wylie avenue, and Carl Furigan. Police who raided the farm said a 200-gallon still was in operation. They seized 20 gallons of moonshine and 60 barrels of mash.

Woman Takes Poison By Error, in Hospital

Mrs. Mildred Newman, 28, of 233 Carron street, was in Pittsburgh Hospital today suffering from poisoning, accidentally taken in her home, according to a police report.

WOODMAN KIND TO SQUIRRELS

Three squirrels—Pete, Peg, and Joe—thought they were playing in pretty bad luck several days ago, when they were evicted from their comfortable home in a tree, in Ben Avon Borough, which Woodman Howard J. Newman cut down. Newman didn't realize he was playing the part of the cruel landlord until he heard the squeals of one of the baby squirrels which suffered an injured leg.

But Pete, Peg, and Joe, probably figure now it wasn't such a bad break after all—since Newman took them to his home, 335 Plumber avenue, Emsworth, fed them on bottled milk and nuts, and did his best to make it up. They have become very tame and great favorites with everyone in the family. As soon as Joe's injured leg is completely cured, they will all be returned to their mother, who is living with another brother in a tree near their old residence.

Transfer Refused, Motorman Slashed

Refused a transfer, Oscar Hill, 25, Negro, of Lafferty avenue, slashed Motorman John Palmere, 38, of Missouri avenue, with a knife, according to police. Hill's request, made as the car stopped at Fifth avenue and Wood street, was refused because of the late hour.

Hill was held for court by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Central Police Court. Palmere's wounds were treated at Allegheny General Hospital.

Youth Hit By Auto, Taken to Hospital

Andreas Klemins, 17, of 1230 Spring Garden avenue, was treated in Allegheny General Hospital early today for injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile driven, police say, by Edwin Clarke, 20, of Allison Park, at East and Howard streets. Clarke was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

County Officers Get Liquor in Two Raids

Whisky, moonshine and beer were seized by county detectives in raids yesterday at 2218 Tustin street and 1206 River avenue. In the former place, Mollie Smith was arrested, while John Dolinski was held as proprietor of the latter.

ELECTRICITY REVOLUTIONIZES MUSIC

RUSSELL TRUETT — MISS PEARL BROWN

YOU PLAY THE MANDOLIN, THE ELECTRIFIED MUSIC COMES OUT OF THE LOUD SPEAKER!

Mandolin Latest Instrument Affected

And now, what is said to be the latest in electrified music, comes the electric mandolin.

The first in Pittsburgh belongs to Russell Truett, a stringed instrument instructor, of 11 East Ohio street.

A simple mandolin, it is attached by wires to an amplifier, which renders the instrument, Truett says, capable of concert work. He said:

"It will partially revolutionize the threaded instruments. This is only the beginning. It is not perfected, but imagine what it will be when it is. I can now solo with my mandolin in an auditorium of any size, and the gallery can hear me. It is inexpensive."

Suicide Attempt Leads to Arrest

Vincent Banaszak, 35, of 513 Behring street, faced a hearing in South Side Police Court today on a disorderly conduct charge, after he is alleged by police to have attempted to end his life by drinking poison.

Banaszak told his wife he was "going to kill himself" because she no longed loved him. As Banaszak placed a bottle said to have contained poison to his lips, his wife knocked it from his hand.

AIR SAFER THAN LAND SAYS 'FLYING FAMILY' MOTHER

DEFENDS TAKING OF CHILDREN ON SEA HOP

Mrs. Blanche Hutchinson, mother of the flying family, answers criticisms of the action of herself and her husband in taking their two children with them on their attempted trans-Atlantic flight, which ended when their plane was forced down off the coast of Greenland.

By MRS. BLANCHE HUTCHINSON

(Copyright, 1932, Universal Service, Inc.)

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Now that we are home again, I am just realizing the force of the criticisms directed against my husband and myself for taking Kathryn and Janet Lee on our recent flight.

And I am amazed.

This is a modern age—we are not living in the covered wagon days, and in a few more years air transportation will be taken as a matter of course.

I supposed that such was the case already.

In my opinion aviation is the safest form of travel.

Both Kathryn and Janet Lee have been hurt when they had both feet on the ground, but never yet have they been injured in the air. And Kathryn has had more than 1,000 hours in the air already, while Janet Lee's score is over 900.

DECLARES DANGER SLIGHT

Our experience when our plane was forced down in the storm off the Greenland coast may have seemed harrowing to those who read of it, but actually we were in little danger.

We had a radio receiving set, and were getting bulletins from the ships searching for us all the time. We knew they were within 30 miles of us and that they would be sure to find us in time. It was more frightening to those who read of it than it was to us.

Naturally there are hazards in any kind of travel—even in walking across the street. Kathryn was knocked down by a truck once and had to spend weeks in the hospital. Now she is much more frightened of traffic on the ground than of the most strenuous trip by air.

Mothers who take their children riding in automobiles run a greater risk than we do when we fly. Compare the number of automobile casualties with those of airplane accidents.

The children are at home in the air. It is as commonplace to them as a subway ride is to other children.

In another 10 years a trip such as we took will attract no attention. It will be commonplace.

The longest hop we took on our recent trip was 650 miles. We have made much longer jumps than that in overland flying here, without criticism.

We stopped four or five days after each hop, and the children had good beds every night and proper meals.

CHILDREN ENJOYED TRIP

Even during those two nights we spent on the Greenland coast, they had their hot milk and soup and chocolate, and even their prunes, that I had packed in our emergency rations.

Both Kathryn and Janet Lee had the best time on this trip that they ever had in their lives.

They have seen strange new places and have met new people.

It has been worth years of schooling to them.

And I am completely honest when I say that I'm glad we went—and I'd do it again.

THRONGS HAIL HINDENBURG

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Great crowds cheered lustily for President Paul von Hindenburg as he drove to church on his eighty-fifth birthday yesterday and acclaimed him again later after he reviewed the Berlin garrison in front of his temporary residence on the Wilhelmstrasse.

Hundreds of persons wrote congratulations in the visitors' book kept in the vestibule at the residence he is occupying while the executive mansion undergoes repairs.

POTSDAM, Germany, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—While the nation was celebrating President von Hindenburg's eighty-fifth birthday, 90,000 boys and girls passed in review yesterday before Adolf Hitler in tribute to the leadership of the National Socialist party.

Quiz 2 Brothers In 'Brick Murder'

LIGONIER, Pa., Oct. 3.—State police of Greensburg today will question further two brothers who are being held at the police barracks in connection with the slaying of Alphonse Citrone, 40, whose head was battered with a cement block.

An argument started in a dance hall at Wilpen, a mining town near here, early yesterday morning, troopers said. Citrone was found on the road near the hall with the block, weighing about 15 pounds, near his body. John and Walter Hobert, brothers, both of Wilpen, were later arrested.

TOURIST CAMP FAMILY 'BROKE'

A family with five children was reported destitute in Schenley Park tourist camp, and a medicine show "strong man" and his wife were in Pittsburgh Hospital today on the verge of starvation.

Edward Doyle, caretaker of the tourist camp, reported that Frank Pierce, unemployed Detroit auto machinist, his wife, Marie, and five children were stranded and threatened with starvation in the park. One of the children, Margaret, 9, is an invalid. The others are Franklin, 12; Irene, 4; Robert, 6, and Joan, 1.

Pierce, a Spanish-American War veteran, came to Pittsburgh after being laid off by a Detroit factory. He had been evicted from his home, and hoped to find work here. The family walked nearly all the way from Michigan, pushing the small children in baby carriages. On the trip, Margaret, who had been operated upon for a leg injury, and who had been in a hospital 11 weeks, fell and reopened the wound. According to the mother, an infection has set in and the child is badly in need of hospital care.

They have been in the park since early last week, having been given temporary help by tourists in the camp and families in the neighborhood. Pierce has been unable to find employment.

2 Collapse on Street From Lack of Food

A medicine show "strong man" and his young wife were in the Pittsburgh Hospital today suffering from lack of nourishment. Patrolman James M. McCormick reported he found Albert Collins, of Washington, and his wife Laura, 24, unconscious at Homewood and Penn avenues last night.

They were rushed to the hospital, where physicains reported they were suffering from a lack of food.

Collins told police that neither he nor his wife had tasted food within the last 48 hours. They hitch-hiked to Pittsburgh, they said, when a medicine show where they were performing went "broke" in Zanesville, O. Collins, assisted by his wife, did a "strong man act," he said.

SUPREME COURT RECONVENES

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The Supreme Court reconvened today after a recess of four months and remained in session 20 minutes, admitting attorneys to practice before it and receiving motions.

One of the most important was those submitted by Ohio, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin through Attorney General Bettman, of Ohio, asking the court to take some action to enforce its decree requiring the Chicago sanitary district to construct sewage disposal works and reduce the diversion of water from Lake Michigan.

The court did not make its customary visit at the White House because of President Hoover's preparation for departure to speak in Iowa tomorrow. The nine justices will pay their respects to the President Friday.

SCORES COUNTY POOR BOARDS

HARRISBURG, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Improvement of county poor relief administration and the removal of these agencies from politics was advocated today by Dr. Wilmer Krusen, of Philadelphia, vice president of the Public Charities Association of Pennsylvania.

Dr. Krusen outlined his plan at a joint meeting of the regional Pennsylvania conference on social welfare with the local Rotary Club.

Declaring there has long been criticism regarding the "outworn and outmoded" system of county poor boards, Dr. Krusen said the present emergency has made it a state-wide public matter.

William M. Finn, of Boston, who, as an altar boy, served chaplains at the state prison in the Charlestown section of Boston, was Pomeroy's only acquaintance to attend the burial.

Removal of Latrobe Burgess Contested

GREENSBURG, Pa., Oct. 3.—Claiming the county courts have no authority to oust Dr. J. E. Peebles, aged burgess of Latrobe, from public office, his counsel has filed a petition for dismissal of the proceedings. Peebles' counsel contends that only the Governor has authority to remove a municipal officer.

MILK BOTTLES FILLING UNDERGROUND CORRIDORS OF LONG-GONE LUTZ BREWERY

Milk Bottles Replace Beer in Old Brewery

Crates of milk bottles today line the caverns of the old Lutz brewery, Spring Garden avenue, North Side, where more than 50 years ago brew of a choice variety was permitted to age.

In 1909 the towering old brewery was dismantled, and, although most of it has been renovated into a milk bottle exchange, the rambling dark caverns still remain.

Deep under the earth, low tunnels lead to many caves. In some, huge pipe-fed vats, 500-barrel capacity, still stand.

OLD BOOK MART AT PITT FINDS TRADE DULL

The bottom has fallen out of the used book market at the University of Pittsburgh.

Posted on the bulletin board in the "Y Hut" are notices of dozens of books for sale. Each year some students have marketed their old books by the bulletin board method, but more are doing so than ever before. Even low prices has not snared buyers.

Most students are throwing their history and government books overboard, and therefore they are the cheapest and hardest to sell. Some listed are "American Government and Politics," "Economic History of the United States," "The Emergence of the Modern Order," "The Engineers and the Price System," "American Civilization" and the "Economic History of Europe."

Psychology, chemistry, anatomy, philosophy and biology books are also listed. However, they are few compared with the government and history volumes.

One student who was looking the board over remarked:

"Who wants a political book? Maybe you don't think so, but they're the bunk. What I want is a book called 'The First Course in Public Speaking.' All you need is a good line today."

HELD FOR PROBE IN 'SPEAK' DEATH

Stanley Petrauski was turned over to the Coroner today for questioning in the death of Charles Davis, of Charlestown, W. Va., who, according to police, was found with his skull fractured in the basement of his alleged speakeasy at 2226 Jane street, yesterday. Petrauski was held for court yesterday on a liquor law violation charge as a result of a raid growing out of Davis' death.

Six companions with whom Davis attended a sales convention in the Fort Pitt Hotel told detectives they found Davis in the washroom of Petrauski's establishment unconscious.

Detectives said they found a quantity of whisky in Petrauski's place.

Hunter Found Dead, Murder Suspected

WELLSBURG, W. Va., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—J. A. Wilson, 42, missing since Saturday when he went hunting, was found dead by searchers in the woods north of Wellsburg. He was shot in the head and chest with a shotgun.

Sheriff I. W. Charnock, Brooke County, said Wilson's shotgun lay beside him fully loaded and that he believed Wilson either was shot accidentally by another hunter or was slain.

Burglars Loot Home While Boy Preaches

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—While the family of Noah S. Myers was away with their 13-year-old evangelist son, Paul, they reported, burglars ransacked the house yesterday and stole a wallet containing $600 from its hiding place behind books in a bookcase.

Returning home after their son had preached at Pen Argyl and Brownsville, they found all lights burning in the house, and the entire dwelling ransacked.

Auto Kills Gasoline Station Attendant

Japanese Volcano Quiet Years Erupts

TOKIO, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The volcano Shirane burst into activity yesterday after remaining dormant 29 years. Two persons living near the cone were missing and believed burned to death in the lava that poured down the mountainside.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear Wubbleyou: The Portrait item about the couple who want to give their baby away for a while, so it won't starve, has aroused an army of readers . . . Numerous queries for more data on the plan, etc. . . . I wrote to the mother at that address she gave, but the letter was returned today "not known" . . . Do you think they were dispossessed, already? . . . I know a lumber firm upstate that will give land away free to anybody who promises to purchase materials . . . Margie Finley called. Says she'd appreciate your saying that she isn't suing Phil Plant, as reports have had it, and that she has stopped all action, etc. . . . Abe Lyman and Eddie Duchin may be Hannah Williams' part-time pals, but Russ Columbo insists he's head man. It's all mixed up . . . What Variety didn't add about Kate Smith is that she was ill and couldn't oblige at the time . . . A week later, however, she arranged a 3-hour concert : ting the Saranac unemployed $1,000 . . . Speaking of "Grands," Frank Shafer won $1,000 in a slogan contest last week . . . The persistent report that the Vallees are to be da-da'd is up again . . . That probably explains the reconciliation.

You still owe me $3.85 for incidentals . . . Get a load of Cyrus Fisher's mag piece on window sill. An article on broadcasters, which says in part: "You may not like Mr. Winchell. I doubt that he wants you to" . . . At last—a critic who understands you.

Well, sir—your friend, Mr. Vallee is making comical remarks unintentionally, again . . . At the Hipp in Baltimore the other day the manager wanted to pull a press stunt with Rudy . . . The plot was to get three of Baltimore's prettiest belles to pose with Rudy, and a doctor was to watch their heart reactions while Rudy went into his charm and magic, as it is amusingly called . . . So what happened? . . . So this happened . . . Heaven's gift to America refused, and offered this as his reason: "I never do anything that will get into the papers until I have thought it over carefully and decided if it would be dignified. I always say to myself: 'Would Lindbergh do it?'"

If you feel in the mood to tease Simon & Schuster—say that the lovely bronze statue in their entrance hall is made of plaster-of-paris . . . Lew Alter toys with "Uruguay" in a sentence like this: "Uruguay and I'll go mine!" . . . Arthur Tracy, the Street Singer, paid his agent 40 Gs to get rid of him . . . Johnny Broderick, the detective ace, has a sister, aged 10, who sings delightfully. Marion Broderick is the name and she will get her first big break canarying for The American Legion's forthcoming doings . . . Did you know that the cuties from the shows are to blame for many of the local speakeasy raids? . . . The revenue agents have money to spend, and fancy cars, etc., and so the darlings are impressed . . . They pose as strangers in town, and naturally the gals fall, and take them to their favorite joints. The managements usually know the girls and figure it's okay . . . Tell those dollies to grow up, will you?

Add funny parodies—Joe Lewises on "Say It Isn't So," and Nut Club . . . Sunny Trowbridge has taken the big step. I mean, she has broken away from the chorus and is going great in Washington as a mistress of ceremonies . . . It takes plenty to try to click, which she certainly has done, according to the public prints there . . . Cardini, the clever magician, is sick over Keith (Vanities) Clark's pipe and cigar bit . . . Cardini says it belongs to him, his own creation, and is worried that when his big moment comes in a Broadway show the critics will charge him with thefting it from Clark . . . The inside on the J. Stanley Morris-Jean Coventry elopement, marriage and split all within a week, goes this way—Morris, it appears, had just been spurned by an English heiress, who favored Morris' best man (Ernest Parker) at his wedding . . . Now that Coventry has left, the heiress has ditched Parker for Morris again. Parker is a bit bewildered; the apt. at 7 Park Ave. will have a bride, after all; Coventy has had her career, thrill and disappointment, Faith Bacon has had her publicity, and everybody's happy.

George Raft will scale the heights to stardom, according to Hollywoodlanders, who witnessed a preview of "Night After Night" . . . This was originally L. Bromfield's "Number 55," you know . . . Archie Mayo directed . . . They also say that some Hollywood-choppers, annoyed over George M. Cohan's opinions of their town, are plotting a snappy comeback directed at the Yankee Doodler . . . Cohan hasn't had a controversy in so long, he probably will love it . . . Here's another movie item—Fox will sign Willie Collier to dialogue Charles Farrell's next. Collier's steady flow of wit over the Weber & Fields testimonial microphones clinched it . . . You weren't barred from "Vanities"—tickets were there for you. I am glad you decided not to go . . . Incidentally Mr. Carroll charges $4.40 for his choice tickets this year . . . Last year he started the $3 top, you remember—"no show was worth more, etc." . . . Wonder if he has taken advantage of the present sitcheeayshun? . . . Meaning that he has no opposition now, with Zieldfeld dead and George White in a coma.

You hurt a lotta feelings over at "Ballyhoo" with that Monday line . . . The show is going stronger every day . . . Lachmann said he was going to punch your nose, but I told him that you "take big steps," and that no one has ever caught up to you yet . . . By all means hear Crosby waddle-de-dah-dah "Some of These Days," and Mildred Bailey go to town with her newest version of "Rockin' Chair's Got Meh!" . . . It got meh, behbeh.

'Giant Swing' May Star Foster

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 3.

The young piano-playing hero of "The Giant Swing" is almost sure to be Norman Foster, who did such a swell job in M. G. M.'s "Skyscraper Souls."

When he first came out here, Foster stood a little in the shadow of his beautiful wife, Claudette Colbert, but the film people took to him and now he is advancing rapidly in a professional way.

Mr. Foster

The Fox deal hangs on the straightening out of a few details, and is pretty sure to go through. If it does, Norman will share honors with Ricardo Cortez, who has been signed to portray the virile "Spanish" of the story.

Offering, as it does, the colorful background of an amusement park, "The Giant Swing" is looked on as good movie material. W. R. Burnett (you remember his "Little Caesar," of course), has come to Hollywood and is helping Garrett Fort to write the adaptation of his new novel.

BOULEVARD CHATTER:

The feud between two Hollywood actresses took a new spurt the other day. One of them was invited to that famous Gay Nineties costume party. "Whom are you going as?" she was asked. Smiling sweetly, she gave the name of her rival.

Virginia Cherrill has lunched five times with George Raft at the Brown Derby—that almost constitutes a Hollywood engagement . . . Though Austrian by birth, Zita Johann is mad about Russian cooking. She has her Russian chef come to Universal to prepare her luncheon . . . Director Clarence Brown has taken a house near that of Jack Gilbert . . . Looks as if things are still going strong between Estelle Taylor and John Warburton. She dropped over to R-K-O to visit him the other day . . . Kitty Curtiz, daughter of Director Michael Curtiz, was in a Los Angeles radio playlet last evening . . . What Al Jolson would rather do than anything else in the world is to play in a musical version of "Porgy." Author Dubose Heyward has asked him to come to New York next month for a conference . . . Cary Grant is distributing cards advertising his new men's shop on Wilshire boulevard. He's operated one in New York for some time . . . Sally Blane and Polly Ann Young were guests at that Ritzy dinner party given at the Cocoanut Grove by Stephen Raphael, a young man with good looks and a big bank account.

SWIMMER GETS TEST

Norman Ross, former champ swimmer, talked so persuasively over long distance that Paramount is taking a test of him for the lead in "King of the Jungles."

Tough Cap'n

Triangle

He lives in Chicago now and has done work on the radio.

It may be that Joan Crawford will star in "Lost," but if she had her desire, the picture would be a remake of "The Merry Widow" with Jack Gilbert again playing the romantic lover. Joan admits she wouldn't fit into a musical version, such as the studio has talked of, but doesn't see why the picture must have songs.

The masculine lead in "The Son-Daughter" is see-sawing back and forth between Robert Montgomery and Ramon Novarro. Bob already has taken a test, but if Irving Thalberg doesn't okay it, Ramon will be tried out. Helen Hayes, of course, plays the feminine lead.

At the same studio, Karen Morley is victor in another see-saw-ing contest. She gets the lead in "Flesh" with Wallie Beery and Ricardo Cortez.

Marie Dressler Dons Silks, Satins

Marie Dressler's fans will have an opportunity of seeing her dressed up in her role in "Prosperity" for she discards her gingham and calico gowns in this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture for silks and satins.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Tonight is the night for Edwin Vail and his players. Eddie will be back home again in the Pitt, where he formerly directed the George Sharp Players, and did a good job of it, too. Now he directs his own company. In fact, he has been doing that very thing for the past week, during their rehearsals of "The Bride the Sun Shines On," which will be the debut vehicle for the new resident company, beginning tonight. Players are new to Pittsburgh audiences, but all are experienced in stock and regular legitimate theater work, so, under the hand of such a capable director as Mr. Vail, they may be expected to be all that could be desired in such an enterprise. The initial play is a comedy drama in which Dorothy Gish appeared in New York last season. Shirley Booth will play the leading feminine role and Alden Chase will be seen opposite her. Four matinees, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, will be the afternoon policy at the Pitt. The next play will be "As Husbands Go." Mr. Vail promises to introduce visiting stars frequently.

* * *

In the Nixon tonight there will begin a fortnight of Theater Guild productions, two to be presented in successive weeks. That of tonight will be "The Good Earth," which will feature Alla Nazimova and Earles Larrimore, whose support will include two fine veteran actors, Henry Travers and Sidney Greenstreet. Next Monday June Walker and Osgood Perkins will come along in "The Pure in Heart." Thurston Hall, long popular here as a leading man in stock of other days, will be a member of this company. Mr. Hall renewed old acquaintance here last season, when he remained in our midst for two weeks while playing in the Guild success, "Mourning Becomes Electra," with Judith Anderson and Florence Reed.

* * *

Syria's Varieties, vaudeville, will open in the Syria Mosque tonight for six evening and Wednesday and Saturday matinee performances, all open to the general public . . . Constance Collier has arrived from England to appear in the new George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber play, "Dinner at Eight" . . . Richard De Angelis, son of the veteran comedian, Jefferson De Angelis, has been signed for a part in a new drama, "Incubator" . . . James Cagney's first picture following the settlement of studio trouble will be "Bad Boy," from Huston Branch's "The Lowdown" . . . Mr. and Mrs. George Arliss have returned from a summer vacation in England . . . Adolphe Menjou is back from France.

Smilin'

Miss Barrymore Uses Gish Bungalow

Ethel Barrymore, who is playing the Czarina of Russia in Metro-Goldywyn-Mayer's "Rasputin," costarring with her famous brothers, Lionel and John, is using the portable bungalow which once belonged to Lillian Gish. It has been redecorated and refurnished for the use of Miss Barrymore.

Viewing the Favorites

Miriam Hopkins' greatest horror is being introduced at public gatherings . . . In describing, George M. Cohan waves arms off stage as well as on . . . Harpo Marx, shoved before microphone at premiere, maintains silence by whistling his greeting . . . Frederic March one of Hollywood's best tennis players.

Wynne Gibson always loses weight working in film . . . Tallulah Bankhead loves to sit with legs tucked under her . . . Charlie Ruggles says longest sentence in fewest word is when judge says "life" . . . Ernst Lubitsch walks miles every day pacing set while working.

Alison Skipworth says 'tis easier to work in talking than silent pictures . . . George Raft contends he's old fashioned . . . abhors taste of liquor . . . Gail Patrick, Paramount's new contractee, wears only red, white, black . . . Sari Maritza wrinkles chin when thinking.

What's What In Movies

Maureen O'Sullivan was appropriately costumed for her luncheon engagement at the Brown Derby the other noon—for she wore a smart brown outfit set off by one of those new brown derby hats.

Veree Teasdale is looking for all kinds of luck in her roles for she has moved in the house that Norma Shearer lived in when she graduated from featured roles to stardom.

College Girls in One-Leg Test cut down Stocking Runs 75%

"I washed one stocking every day the Lux way—the other I rubbed with cake soap. See the run in the cake-soap stocking! The Lux stocking is like new. Nothing but Lux for our stockings from now on, we girls all say."
Marjorie Sheerin

A GROUP of college girls got together recently on a test of stocking wear.

The "One-Leg Test" they call it, because one stocking was washed every night the Lux way—the other rubbed with cake soap.

They reported amazing results! 75% fewer runs in the Lux-washed stockings than in the stockings labeled "Cake Soap."

Cake-soap rubbing destroys the elasticity of the silk. This is the live, stretchable quality of silk which makes it wear. Lux is made to preserve this vital elasticity. No wonder the Lux way of washing makes stockings wear much longer—prevents needless runs.

The LUX Way to cut down runs

Wash this 2-minute way:

1. One teaspoon of Lux for each pair.
2. Add lukewarm water to Lux, squeeze suds through, rinse.

Try Lux FREE! Try this wonderful care for your stockings at our expense. Just send us your name and address, and by return mail you will receive a full-sized package of Lux free. Write today to Lever Brothers Co., Dept. KX-3, Cambridge, Massachusetts.

Mrs. H. N. Aikens washed 468 pieces with one box of LUX:

48 pairs silk stockings	72 pairs children's socks
37 pieces lingerie	66 pieces table linen
14 silk nightgowns	72 small handkerchiefs
18 silk pajamas	48 men's handkerchiefs
36 children's undergarments	3 sweaters (baby's)

BITS OF LIFE

All in a Day

By Mark Hellinger

The Dutchman

HE'S TALL, thick set, and fairly good looking. He has a deep voice that once heard is never forgotten. It sounds like thunder far away. Or the friendly growl of a dog that wants to play. Frankly, I don't know exactly what it sounds like. But he has a remarkable voice, this Dutchman.

Funny thing about this case. I've known the man for two or three years and never realized that there was a story behind him. But that, I suppose, is by no means a remarkable occurrence. When you stop to consider that I've missed some of the very finest stories in the land in my day, one more doesn't make very much difference. If all the good yarns that I've missed were laid end to end, they would then be laid end to end.

But The Dutchman always held my interest anyway. In the first place, he was a good waiter. And when you find a good waiter, Utopia can't be far off.

I liked him mainly because he had the happy faculty of being able to anticiuate my wants. Before I realized that I needed more butter, he would be on his way for it. Before I got an idea that chili sauce would be just right, he had it at the table. And sometimes, before I thought of the check, he had it on the table.

He was always considerate. He remembered names well, and even though his German accent was so thick that you could hardly understand your own name, it was a pleasure to hear that guttural voice murmur it.

But it was only recently that I began to watch the man more closely. I took note of his every action, for the simple reason that I was interested.

He had a very studied walk. By that I mean that he walked with an ease and swing that was too graceful to be natural for such a big man.

Then, too, he had gestures. And when he bowed, you would think of some stage star, or duke—or perhaps Lowell Sherman.

At any rate, The Dutchman had something. Above all, he had me guessing.

Now I had been frequenting that place since before The Dutchman had started to work there, and, strangely enough, I was on good terms with the proprietor.

So one night I called him over.

"Max," I said, "who is The Dutchman?" There's something strange about the man. He wasn't always a waiter, was he?"

Max laughed.

Heavens, no," he said. "The Dutchman has been a bit more elevated in his day then he is now. In fact, he has already hit the heights and the chutes."

He told me the story. The Dutchman had been born in Germany of substantial folk. They belonged to a troupe of traveling actors. Every day they would pitch a tent on the outskirts of a town or village and give a performance. At night they would move on to the next town. And so on.

At the tender age of 11 months, The Dutchman played the part of a baby in one of the shows. Max assured me that he played it to perfection. That is, except for one thing. During a certain line, he was supposed to cry. Sometimes he wouldn't. In those cases his cue was a pinch. It never failed.

He grew up with theatrical blood in his veins. The kid could remember his lines long before he could remember the answer to one and one.

When he reached adolescence, his parents sent him to a Berlin drama school. The kid turned out to be good.

After graduation, he went into stock company work and traveled all over Europe. And it didn't take him long to discover that he had another gift. He was a linguist. He picked up Russian, Yiddish, Italian, Spanish and French as though he were born to those languages.

Then, to climax a successful career, he was called back to Berlin by a great producer. He was given a small part in one of the big productions, and his fame and fortune were assured.

It was then that The Dutchman began to hear rumors about Hollywood. That was back in 1925, when John Gilbert was a Clark Gable and Mae Murray was a Greta Garbo. So over he came.

But, all too soon, he found that Hollywood wasn't an actor's paradise. Somehow, they didn't want actors, so far as he could see. They wanted young faces, pretty faces. They wanted pretty legs and gorgeous, empty expressions. But actors? Actors? Oh, those fellows could be found in New York.

The Dutchman refused to give up. He stayed in Hollywood three long years. Sometimes he got a job in mob scenes as an extra. Sometimes he didn't. He barely managed to keep alive, and was all set to give up when the big break came.

A film mogul phoned him one day and asked him to come to the studio. The Dutchman went there with his heart in his throat.

"So," said the executive, after the first handshake, "you can't speak American well, can you?"

The Dutchman admitted that English was the one language he couldn't master. He had tried again and again, but somehow, the tones didn't come easy to his deep voice.

The executive couldn't speak the language either. But that is beside the point.

The producer told The Dutchman that he had just completed a tour of Europe, and that he had heard good reports of him. In Berlin, the mogul continued, theatergoers believed that The Dutchman was one of the biggest screen stars in America, and were wondering how long it would be before his first picture crossed the Atlantic.

The Dutchman fairly glowed with pride. In the end, after much hemming and hawing, the producer finally got down to definite terms. The Dutchman was to get $250 a week for the first year, with an option of renewal at $500 at the expiration of that time. When he left the office, he was walking on air. He was to return in two days to sign the contract.

The proprietor stopped. He looked at me.

"That contract was never signed," he went on. "Within a week The Dutchman was on his way back to New York. He was heartbroken. The contract was a thing of the past and the world had crashed around his ears."

"But why?" I asked. "You told me that—"

Just then The Dutchman's voice broke in from a corner of the room. It sounded like thunder far away. Or the friendly growl of a dog that wants to play. I listened to that strange voice and that terrible accent. And I didn't need the proprietor's reasons as to why that contract was never signed. I knew.

Before the poor guy had had a chance to make his first silent picture, he became a victim of the talkies! . . .

Charles Laughton, Irving Pichel and Arthur Hohl have been assigned leading roles in "Island of Lost Souls." Erle C. Kenton will direct.

Susan Fleming, former Follies girl, will have the lead opposite Stuart Erwin in "The Bookworm Turns." Others in the cast to date are Alison Skipworth, Gordon Westcott, Gertrude Norman, Claude King and Jameson Thomas.

Helene Chadwick, former Paramount star, has ended a two-and-a-half year retirement from the screen to take the first step in staging a "comeback." She has been signed to enact a small but important role under Ernst Lubitsch's direction in "The Golden Widow" in support of Miriam Hopkins, Kay Francis and Herbert Marshall.

Lois Wilson also will return to the screen in "Madison Square Garden," which Charles R. Rogers is producing and Ben Stoloff is directing. Others in the cast are Edmund Lowe, Wynne Gibson, Dickie Moore and James Gleason.

Arnold Korff, Freeman Wood and Grace Hayle have been added to the cast of "Evenings for Sale." They join Herbert Marshall, Sari Maritza, Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland under the direction of Stuart Walker.

Stars Pay Tribute To Dickie Moore

Only one actor in Hollywood receives regular fan mail from film stars. He is Dickie Moore, 5, who boasts a large collection of letters and gifts from filmdom's greatest. His recent presents include an electric train from Tallulah Bankhead and a boat from Marlene Dietrich.

It will be open at 6 o'clock each evening and there will be a floor show nightly and at Saturday tea dansants. John Mazanotti, manager, announces shows will be changed weekly.

Joan Crawford Has New Outfit

Joan Crawford is upsetting Hollywood's fashion morale by her numerous Parisian costumes. One suit that has caused the throwing away of many wardrobes, is of white corduroy velvet with short jacket and high-waisted skirt combined with a powder blue, bow-tied linen blouse. An over-one-eye beret of the same corduroy and a pair of the newest in gloves—also of the velvet, completes the outfit.

Workingman Sane, Writer Declares

The workingman, whether he has worked or not in the last three years, is sane and competent, and Whiting Williams, author and social explorer, doffs the Williams hat to him, Williams told the Hungry Club in the Fort Pitt Hotel today. He added:

"The relief situation in most communities is not so black as it was the previous two years . . . I find as much discontent, but it is less organized."

'Madame Butterfly' To Be Movie

Plans for the first of eight pictures B. P. Schulberg is to produce independently for Paramount are announced following arrangements between Emanuel Cohen, vice president of Paramount in charge of production, and the producer. Schulberg's first will be "Madame Butterfly," in which Sylvia Sidney will enact the title role. Marion Gering, maker of "Ladies of the Big House" and "Devil and the Deep," will direct.

Chicago Girl Named Panther Woman

Kathleen Burke, of Chicago, was selected today by a group of directors as the girl most fitted to play the role of the Panther Woman in "Island of Lost Souls," soon to go into production. Miss Burke, a tall, lithe brunette, was picked from a group of entrants in a nation-wide contest by a committee of judges consisting of Ernst Lubitsch, Cecil B. DeMille, Norman Taurog, Stuart Walker and Erle C. Kenton. She starts her first camera work when the "Island of Lost Souls" company, consisting of herself, Leila Hyams, Charles Laughton, Irving Pichel, Richard Arlen, Arthur Hohl and Director Kenton reaches Catalina Island to spend 10 days making exterior scenes for the picture.

Arthur Hohl Signs For Picture

Arthur Hohl, New York stage player who recently completed his first screen role in Cebil B. DeMilles' "The Sign of the Cross," is the first selection to be announced for the cast of Paramount's "Island of Lost Souls." The picture is an adaptation of H. G. Wells' novel and will introduce the Panther Woman to the screen. To discover the girl ideally suited to play this role, Paramount conducted a nation-wide contest which brought a list of 60,000 aspirants. At present eight candidates are still under consideration for the part.

BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

BUSINESS

Steel Will Recover Along With Other Industries.

—By GEORGE H. SNYDER—

WHAT WILL BE the future of the steel industry? Will it get its full share of the expected recovery in general business, or will it be one of the types of activity to lag behind the movement toward recovery? Conflicting answers have been given to this question at various times during the past three years.

On one side we have had expressions of blind faith in the destiny of the steel industry to continue as the great leader in American business. On the other side we have had stories of excessive capacity, of expenditures for plants which could not possibly be justified by actual earnings.

To get an accurate picture of steel's future we must first realize the part that the industry plays in industry as a whole. There are few products made today which do not contain steel in some form or require steel in their production. Steel's importance has been expanding steadily during the past 10 years and in many cases it has displaced other products.

* * *

Importance of Steel To Trade Summarized

THE PLACE THAT steel holds in our lives has been aptly summarized by Arundel Cotter in an article for the Magazine of Wall Street. Mr. Cotter has been an intimate associate of the late Judge Gary and of Charles M. Schwab. For many years he was steel editor of the Wall Street Journal. He is known for his book, "The Authentic History of the United States Steel Corporation," as well as for a history of Bethlehem Steel. Mr. Cotter said:

"There is hardly a human activity today in which steel does not play a part. The use of steel in building construction is growing every day and the day does not seem very far off when mail order houses will be shipping steel framed houses which can be erected anywhere at a moderate price. Practically all modern transportation depends on steel—locomotives, passenger and freight cars, busses, motors, even airplanes to a certain extent, the machinery that cultivates our farms, spins our woolen and cotton garments, registers sales in stores, balances bank books—and so on ad infinitum. Even our golf club shafts are now being made of steel.

"As to date no metal has been discovered to displace it except to a very moderate extent, and that confined to its lighter uses, the conclusion seems inevitable that the steel trade will prosper when, as and if industry in general prospers; that it cannot prosper without general prosperity."

* * *

Some Consumers May Have Slow Recovery

STEEL'S PLACE is such that it may be considered an accurate barometer of general business. There is no doubt about the fact that steel production will recover along with improvement in other industries. Unless the executives of the dominant companies stoop to utter folly they will be able to restore prices to a more satisfactory level while this improvement is taking place. This means that steel earnings will improve along with production.

It is quite probable, however, that many of steel's important customers will be laggards in the parade of business recovery. Construction and the railroads are large steel consumers. As has been stated in this column before, building is faced with a surplus capacity of structures and a problem of financing new construction projects. Building is likely to lag behind the general recovery by several years.

* * *

Capacity Figures Prove Misleading

The railroads are in a financial muddle and they must get out of it before they can buy much new equipment. The resurrection of railroad buying is likely to be slow, but within a few years worn out rails and rolling stock will have to be at least partially replaced if the steam lines are to continue to handle the bulk of our transportation.

These influences may make steel slow in reproducing its former production peak. But the great number of other industries along with new uses which constantly are being found for steel should give the industry a comfortable working basis even before the lagging consumers solve their problems.

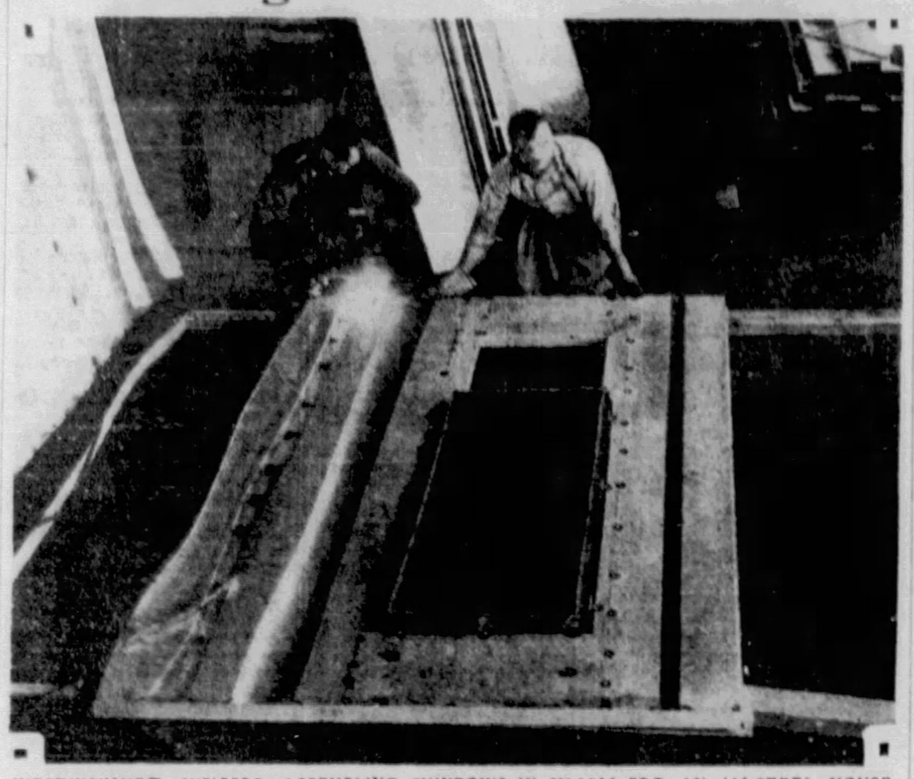
THE STEEL INDUSTRY of this country has a theoretical capacity of nearly 70,000,000 tons. In the record year of 1929 less than 56,500,000 tons were produced, which was about 80 per cent of capacity. The industry at present is working at only about 17 per cent of capacity. From this we might assume that the steel is suffering from a serious problem of overproduction, but we must examine the practical side of the question more thoroughly.

While the steel industry only averaged about 80 per cent of capacity in 1929, it must be remembered that there was an actual shortage of semifinished steel during the peak months of that year. The explanation lies in the fact that no steel plant can possibly work at capacity for any great period of time. Out of a battery of 12 open hearth furnaces two of them almost invariably are closed down to be relined or for other repairs. Blast furnaces cannot work forever without stopping for relining, which takes a considerable period of time. A mill's actual output will vary with the particular size and shape of product it is rolling. A change in product means changing rolls and this means an interruption in operations.

At its busiest in 1929 the industry was working at 90 per cent of capacity and it was straining every facility. Steel is bought from hand to mouth so that the industry must be geared up to meet the demands of peak months of its busiest year. Therefore when the steel trade averages 80 per cent to 85 per cent of capacity during any year it is working close to its practical maximum.

The industry has made large expenditures for plant improvement in recent years, but few of these programs have increased capacity to any great extent. Most of the expenditures were directed toward greater efficiency and lower costs.

Welding Window to Steel Wall



WESTINGHOUSE WELDERS ASSEMBLING WINDOWS IN WALLS FOR AN ALL-STEEL HOUSE

WELDED STEEL DWELLING IS COMPLETE

The house of the future may be made entirely of steel and may be built in large sections at a factory and merely assembled at the site, according to Frank Mead, building manager of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company. He has just made public the construction details of a house built at Solon, O., by his organization and the American Rolling Mill Company.

Mills Clark, designer of the house, shut his eyes to past construction methods and makes use of modern materials and every economical building method. For example, his house walls and floors will be of sheet steel, so shaped that when welded in place no frames or stringers are required, the steel forms performing all functions necessary for rigidity and strength. For an outside covering he is using enameled shingles, nailed in place with a specially developed steel nail. Thus his house will have a permanent outer skin, colored to suit, on which weather will have no effect.

HOUSE SOUNDPROOF

Steel shingles, sheet steel walls and wall board, will provide a house insulated against heat and cold, sound proofed and absolutely fireproof.

The cost of the first house now being erected includes all initial development charges and will be comparable to the cost of constructing an ordinary frame house of similar size. Later, in production, the costs of the house are expected to the halved.

Much of the fabrication work has been performed in a sheet steel plant. Shaping the steel; welding whole walls, with windows and doors in place, all are done in the factory. Then, for example, a wall is loaded on a truck, carried to Solon, and welded into place. Timed, it required about five minutes to lift the wall from the truck and set it in place on the foundation. Another half hour was required to make the necessary welds. A very simple process for the workmen as the sheet steel walls are so light that a strong man can easily lift an entire unit.

THREE MEN NEEDED

Only three men were employed on the erection work. One welding outfit was used.

The exterior of the wall will be heavily insulated against heat or cold. Celotex one inch in thickness will be fastened to the protuding backs of the channels in the wall sheets. The exterior finish will be a porcelain enamel shingle, which solves the house painting problem forever. These shingles are approximately six inches square, and are applied in strips 36 inches long.

BUSINESS ILLS DISCUSSED BY BLASS

For every business ill there is a remedy. Basing his activities on this optimistic philosophy, Andrew H. Blass, founder of the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy, with headquarters in the William Penn Hotel, offers a new hope to sick businesses in Pittsburgh. The name of the doctor is "business consultant" or "management counselor." The technique of recovery consists of a diagnosis based on the discovery and elimination of barnacles accumulated in more prosperous times and an adjustment of business procedure to the scale of present economic conditions. Mr. Blass said:

"The basis of credit has changed. When production volume was great, physical and current assets were dependable criteria of credit ability. The curtailed production of today throws surplus unused equipment into the liability class. The old ratio of two to one, of current assets to current liabilities was considered a perfect risk. Now figures do not mean a thing."

Today credit should be based not only on the status of performance and profit statistics, but on operating conditions and future plans, Mr. Blass believes. He continued:

"A preliminary survey of almost any languishing business shows an accumulation of barnacles. One of the very worst parasitic drains is the presence of friends, acquaintances or relatives on the payroll on a non-productive or inadequate basis. Another is the stagnation induced by the continuation of habitual contracts made during good times and continued without benefit. Over-staffing, and the accumulation of departments not vital to business are deadwood to be eliminated."

When the barnacles have been detected and removed, the constructive phase of the business recovery may be effected. Centralization of management is important. Budget operations must be effected. And then, the work of purgative and tonic begins to show results. The instruments of the business surgeon are vide experience, a practical background, plus confidence and imagination. And the greatest of these is imagination, Mr. Blass said.

CITY IMPORTANT TO OIL

Pittsburgh's early efforts to be the oil capital of the country, its numerous struggles with Cleveland and Rockefeller for that eminence, together with many incidents in the early business history of Pittsburgh, form an important part in a new life of John D. Rockefeller written by John T. Flynn and published under the totle of "God's Gold."

The book gives a vivid picture of what Flynn calls the first American oil man—Samuel Kier, who sold petroleum in bottles long before Rockefeller ever heard of oil. Kier was a resident of Pittsburgh as his father had been. Even before Kier, as far back as the late forties, there was another petroleum dealer, named Cary, who was then the only living man making a living gathering petroleum by bringing it in a five-gallon keg on horseback from Titusville to Philadelphia and selling it to pharmacists, who used it as a rubbing agent.

Other glimpses of early Pittsburgh history appear in the book. For instance, it reveals that a Standard Oil Company was formed in Pittsburgh before Rockefeller organized this corporation. Many early Pittsburgh businessmen such as Jacob J. Vandergrift, W. G. Gordon, Charles Lockhart play an important part in the story, as well as Tom Scott, later the famous president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, but then a freight superintendent in Pittsburgh with Andrew Carnegie as his assistant.

I. B. M. RETIRES MORE BONDS

International Business Machines Corporation will retire as of January 1, 1933, through the usual sinking fund operation, $500,000 par value of its Computing-Tabulating-Recording Company 6 per cent bonds of 1941, it was announced today. Directors have authorized the deposit of sufficient funds for this purpose with the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, trustee, in accordance with the company's established policy of reducing its outstanding bonds from surplus earnings.

As of June 30, 1932, there were outstanding $1,954,500 par value of these bonds as compared with an original issue of $7,000,000 in 1911. The remainder of the issue has been retired out of earnings.

The company has no other funded debt and no preferred stock outstanding.

TIME FOR OLD LEAGUE TO STIR ITSELF

THE NATIONAL LEAGUE will have to engineer a big uplift within its ranks, both as to playing standards and fighting spirit, or the annual world series will die out as a joke grown stale. The slaughter of the Cubs by Lou Gehrig, Babe Ruth and the rest of the Yankee sluggers in four straight games in the most poorly played title series in history killed the hope born of the Cardinal victory a year ago that the senior circuit had climbed back to the level of its younger rival.

Lou Gehrig

The Bruins, admittedly, were particularly bad in the travesty just ended, and could not be termed truly representative of their league. They were licked from the time Gehrig made his first home run in the fourth inning of the opening game and their play in general was in keeping with the collapse of their supposedly strong pitching staff. But other National League clubs have displayed the same stage fright or inferiority complex in world series competition, besides failing to show playing strength comparable to that their American League opponents. When one club can win 12 title games in a row from three different opponents it indicates more than that club is strong. It indicates that the opposition is weak. Of the last 10 world series the National League has won only three. Of the last six series it has won only one. Of the last 30 games it has won only seven. It's time to wake up, take a leaf out of the American League's book of progress and develop some fighters and ball players.

IN SEEKING TO acquire the services of Al Simmons for 1933, the White Sox accomplished only part of the job when they bought that player from the A's. The next task will be to sign him. That's a detail that has given Connie Mack a headache almost every spring.

That Simmons has not changed his ways is indicated by his remarks when informed of the deal. "If the White Sox are willing to come up to my terms, I'll be tickled to death to play in Chicago," he said. From which it might be inferred that he is already threatening to go on strike if his demands are not met.

CONNIE MACK once declared: "As long as I am manager of the club, Jimmy Dykes will be one of my players." Mack has either remained manager longer than he expected, or he didn't figure that the time might come when he'd have to suggest bigger salary cuts to his men than they'd be willing to accept.

The latter is said to have been one of the reasons for the sale of Dykes. In Washington on the final day of the season, Dykes was called in for a contract conference with Mack and informed that he must expect a 50 per cent reduction in his pact for 1933. Jimmy objected vehemently and thereby sealed his doom.

LEFTY O'DOUL, National League batting champion, gives this advice to aspiring young hitters: "Always look for a fast ball, and the pitcher can't cross you. If you're set at the plate to meet speed, you can shift in time to meet a curve or a change of pace. But if you try to guess with the pitcher, and prime yourself for a curve or a slow ball, there's not a chance in the world of hitting him if he throws a fast one." O'Doul is a smart and resourceful hitter. Naturally a right-field puller, he often breaks up a slump by deliberately pushing the ball to left.

Bill Dinneen

OF THE UMPIRES who worked in the world series, you never read the name of Klem or Magerkurth or Van Grafian in a major league box score, but the fourth arbiter, Bill Dinneen, is himself a former world series hero, and Pittsburghers have cause to remember him.

A star pitcher in his day, Dinneen won three of the five victories that gave the Boston American League club the world title in the tussle with the Pirates in 1903, the first of the modern classics. Two of his wins were shutouts. He beat Sam Leever and Bucky Vail in the second game, 3 to 0; lost to Deacon Phillippe in the fourth, 5 to 4; beat Leever in the sixth, 6 to 3, and defeated Phillippe in the eighth and final contest, 3 to 0.

ONE OF THE first National League players to be placed on the block is Leslie Mallon, Philly second baseman. He has been offered to Cincinnati for $10,000.

The Pittsburgh club made overtures for Mallon when the Phils were on the point of dropping him in 1931, but negotiations were called off when the Quakers asked more than the waiver price.

AROUND THE CAMPUS at Notre Dame, Norman Greeney, a senior, who hails from Cleveland and plays guard, is considered the luckiest fellow on the Irish football squad this fall. This because locker No. 153 has been awarded to him for the season. That's quite a distinction at the South Bend school, inasmuch as locker No. 133 has held the moleskins of such famous all-Americas and almost equally renowned stars as Adam Walsh, Marty Brill, Jack Cannon, Nordy Hoffman, Bud Boeringer and Clipper Smith. The locker is viewed as a doorway to gridiron fame.

THOSE WHO ADVOCATE letting the defending title holder in national golf championships enter the match-play rounds without the necessity of qualifying by medal test found support for their arguments in the women's tournament last week. Miss Helen Hicks, 1931 champion, carded an 89 and failed to qualify.

Yet she went out on the same course the very next day, and under distressing weather conditions shot a brilliant 79, just two above women's par. In that form, she might have retained her title had she made the medal grade. And there is no question that her absence from the match-play rounds took much color out of the tourney.

CHISELERS WHO TRY to steal boxers from their managers despite existing contracts continue to cause trouble in the fight game. The latest gloveman to show signs of having been tampered with is Max Baer, who says he will not fight again until he is no longer tied to Ham Lorimer and several others who have a contractural hold on him.

Joe Jacobs

Another threatened breach has been closed. Kid Chocolate says that he was badly advised, that his near break with Louis Gutierrez was all a mistake, and that hereafter he will go through with any fight that Gutierrez arranges for him.

JACK SHARKEY was an eye-witness when Max Schmeling slaughtered Mickey Walker last week, and many boxing men expressed the opinion that after seeing the handwriting on the wall the champion would sooner or later announce his retirement and run out of his agreement to meet the German again next summer for the title. But Joe Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, pooh-poohs the idea. "Don't be silly," says Jacobs. "A third Sharkey-Schmeling fight would be good for a million dollars, especially if business picks up by next summer, as it should. What a sap Sharkey would be to pass up the champion's cut of a million-dollar gate—almost four hundred thousand dollars. What if he did have to take a beating to collect it? I know lots of guys who would be glad to take a beating for a hundred bucks and hospital expenses."

GENEVA COACH GIVES VIEWS ON BATTLE

By Howard Harpster

I cannot praise too highly the courageous stand of my Geneva College players against Carnegie Tech at the Pitt Stadium last Saturday, when they pushed the Tartans to the limit to eke out a 7-0 victory. It was a desperately fought battle. That Tech had the better team hardly can be disputed, for the statistics show clearly that the advantage in first downs and yards gained from scrimmage was decidedly in its favor, but, although the Geneva boys were outweighed and outscored, they were not outfought.

H. Harpster

With a 163-pound guard and a 165-pound tackle playing the entire game on the right side of the line, and a 162-pound fullback backing up the line in the approved Karcis style, the lighter Geneva team played a great defensive game, and time after time slipped through to stop the powerful Carnegie rushes before they were well started.

Late in the third quarter Geneva, kicking into the wind, got off a short punt which went out of bounds on its own 40-yard line, following which Carnegie made its game-winning drive. On the play preceding the score, Spisak, Carnegie's fine running back, started around end for what seemed to be a certain touchdown, but Buck Nelle dashed into him for the hardest tackle of the day. Buck put himself into a hospital for the night and put Spisak up in the air and out of bounds on the two-yard line. Tech scored on the next play, and Nelle was released from the hospital yesterday.

PASSING DEFENSE GOOD

Offensively, Geneva was able to accomplish little, although it gave its opponent a few anxious moments on several occasions. The Carnegie team was big enough and strong enough to stop the Geneva running attack with a six-man line, which left a five-man defense against forward passes. This being the case, Quarterback Grahame found himself in a tough spot. He couldn't make the necessary yardage by running the ball, and the passes were being rushed by the Carnegie forwards and the receivers were being well covered.

For Geneva, every man played a great game, and the coaches hold nothing but the highest admiration for those boys who were in the game and made such a creditable showing against their bigger and stronger opponents.

TECH SHOWS POWER

Carnegie impressed me as being a powerful team which has everything it needs to make it successful except that it hasn't yet found its stride. The team has several good passers, good kickers, a big, fast line, and several ball carriers who may break away for long runs at the least opportunity. Spisak, in particular, looked very good Saturday when he broke away for quite a few substantial gains. On two or three occasions he all but got away for scores

Pitt served notice on Duquesne that it means business when it walloped West Virginia by a 40-to-0 score. The Dukes nosed out the Mountaineers last week by only a 3-to-0 score, while the Pitt team, using mostly second and third-stringers, ran up six touchdowns against Greasy Neal's eleven with comparative ease.

Breadon said he had been approached recently by a Montreal syndicate, who wanted to buy the Cardinals, but said that was as far negotiations went.

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY'S CARTOON OF LAST SATURDAY: A ROSEBUSH OF 11 CENTURIES—The ancient Rosebush of Hildesheim is said to have been planted on its present site by Emperor Charlemagne early in the ninth century, to celebrate the arrival of an embassy from Harun-al-Rashid, the ruler of the East. Another tradition connects the origin of the Old Rosebush with the time of Louis the Pious, the successor of Charlemagne, who consecrated the spot, July, 815. The Rosebush still blooms on its ancient site within the small churchyard of the Dome every June, as it has done for more than 1,100 years.

BEARCATS TIE WITH CANISIUS

BUFFALO, Oct. 3.—St. Vincent's College, of Latrobe, Pa., fought a heavier Canisius eleven to a 13-13 tie here yesterday afternoon in the opening game of the local football season.

A 35-yard penalty for interference on a forward pass gave Canisius a break in the fourth quarter and placed the ball on the 14-yard stripe. Owing to an oversight, Canisius was given four downs instead of one and on the last try, Capt. Jimmy Geogan ripped over for the touchdown. His try for the extra point was low.

McGraw recovered a fumble on the visitor's 20-yard line to pave the way for the first Canisius touchdown. Seven successive drives by Capt. Geogan netted the score. He place-kicked the point.

A double pass behind the line ending up in a 20-yard pass from Dashner to Johnson resulted in St. Vincent's first touchdown, while the second arrived in the third quarter after a series of passes that placed the ball on the 10-yard line. Furin, on a reverse, wriggled his way to the two-yard stripe and then slid off tackle for a touchdown. His place-kick also failed.

St. Vincent's outplayed Canisius by a wide margin in the second and third periods. Coach Edward's crew, penalized 90 yards, registered eight first downs to seven for the home eleven. Johnson's brilliant running and kicking was outstanding. The lineup:

Canisius—13.		St. Vincent—13.
Daven	L. E.	Carney
Delva	L. T.	Zappone
Hartke	L. G.	Pluck
Myleck	C.	Brown
McGraw	R. G.	O'Brien
Schafer	R. T.	Connors
Potter	R. E.	Best
Varella	Q.	Dacher
Zernentsch	L. H.	Furin
Turgeon	R. H.	Johnson
Geagan	F.	Paul

Canisius	7	0	0	6	—13
St. Vincent	0	7	6	0	—13

Scoring—Canisius: Touchdowns, Geagen, Varella. Point after touchdown—Geagen (place kick).

Substitutions—Canisius: Hovey for Turgeon, Rybak for Zernentsch, Kane for Varella, Dowdall for Schafer; Procmo for Gavin, Curtin for McGraw, Rustich for Geagan, Fricke for Myleck, Buckley for Hartke, Toole for Potter.

St. Vincents—Stanko for Duda, Diamond for Carney, Rafferty for Connors, Heckert for Zappone, Pearl for Stanko, Gump for Furnin.

SPORT VIGNETTES

There's work ahead for Commissioner of Baseball Landis . . . He'll have to revise the world series plan to save the game for the common people . . . With the Yankees making a clean sweep in their last three series, something will have to be done . . . For instance, how about making a rule to the effect that, if the Yankees win the pennant, the runnerup team represents the American League in the series? . . . Or permit the other team to feed Babe Ruth hot dogs for a week before the series? . . . And make Lou Gehrig go back to Columbia as football coach as soon as the regular season ends? . . . Or let the Homestead Grays or Crawford Stars represent the National League in the series?

And there's work ahead, too, for the Carnegie Tech coaches, following their meager 7-0 victory over Howard Harpster's Geneva College eleven last Saturday, with Geneva several times being in a scoring position. . . . Coach Jock Sutherland is bringing his team along slowly this year to keep it from going stale before the more important games to come. . . . Which accounts for the fact that it has scored only 87 points in its first two games. . . . Yale, 0; Bates, 0, or, as the Irishman said, "Doesn't it bate everything how these little colleges are coming up?" . . . With Chung Hoon playing halfback and William and Mary beating Navy, 6-0, in the opening game, the Middies don't appear to have a Chinaman's chance this fall.

There'll be no National League hockey in Pittsburgh this winter, which may be a good thing if National League hockey is anything like National League world series play . . . The crack Ohio State band will make only one trip with the Buckeye team this fall and that will be to Pittsburgh for the game with Pitt at the Stadium . . . Is that music to your ears?—HARRY KECK.

PLAYER MELON $363,822.27

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The world championship Yankees and their Cub victims failed to break the record for the biggest player melon in the world series, but it was a bumper of the $363,822.27 variety.

By the fortunes of war, the Yanks will receive a team cut of $152,805.35 while the Cubs get $101,870.24 on the divisional man-to-man basis, each Yank will receive approximately $5,000 for four days' work. Each Cub's share will be almost as high, around $4,000, for the simple reason that they weren't as liberal in cutting their melon as their conquerers.

While the Yanks split their boot into 30½ shares with $2,700 to the clubhouse man and to two bat boys, the Cubs divided theirs on a 24-share basis, leaving former Manager Rogers Hornsby out altogether.

The record for a players' melon in the world series was established by New York and St. Louis Cardinals in 1928, the cut reaching $419,736.60. In 1929 the players' pool was $388,086.66 with the Cubs and Philadelphia Athletics in the big split.

On the agreement of the player pool division, the second place teams in both leagues, the Athletics and Pittsburgh Pirates received $29,786.67 for each team. Washington and Brooklyn, third place winners, receive $18,174.44 each. Cleveland and the Philadelphia Nationals each will be rewarded with $6,612.23 for finishing fourth.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Oct. 3.—The University of Pittsburgh football team will come here to meet West Virginia University on September 30, 1933, it was announced here today by Harry Stansbury, director of athletics at West Virginia.

The Mountaineers will open their 1933 season with Duquesne University in a night battle at Pittsburgh.

DelVecchio, Eldred Win Special Match

Perry DelVecchio, Greensburg, West Penn open and tri-state professional champion, and Vincent Eldred, of Highland, state open champ, combined yesterday to defeat Ted Luther, Valley Heights pro and Emil (Dutch) Loeffler, Oakmont professional, in a special four-ball, best-ball exhibition at Valley Heights. The score was 4 and 2.

The victors led from the start, being 2 up at the end of the first nine holes.

Today, at Chartiers Heights, the Caddie Masters' and Assistant Professionals' Golf Association will hold a one-day tourney. The P. S. G. A. has a tourney listed for Edgewood Wednesday.

At Edgewood yesterday, P. H. Gruhagle lost to E. J. Patterson, 3 and 2, in the second flight of the club championship play, with the championship match, scheduled between Dr. L. D. Cratty and E. L. Eigant being postponed for a week.

Mrs. S. R. Walton, with a 3 up score, led the field in the match play against par competition at Stanton Heights.

NEW YORKERS ROUT BRUINS IN FINAL

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The world series of 1932 trailed off today toward its final resting place among baseball's legends, leaving the realm of the National pastime once more under the absolute rule of the American League, and one of the greatest champions in all sports history—the New York Yankees.

Never before in all the glamorous past of the game has any ball club approached the amazing record of the belting behemoths from Broadway, conquerors of the Chicago Cubs in four straight games, possessors of a streak of 12 successive world series triumphs.

It was something to set down in the record books with a proper touch of awe and veneration when the Yankees of 1927 and 1928 swept through first the Pittsburgh Pirates and then the St. Louis Cardinals to win two world titles without a single defeat. Now the Cubs have been added to that amazing record.

OUTLOOK DISMAL

And worse still for the National League and its sorry attempts to keep from being trampled on by the marauding giant, there seems little prospect of the present situation taking any immediate turn for anything but the worse.

Almost as a big good-naatured St. Bernard, unaware of its own strength, cuffs in fun at a game little puppy, all but mortally wounding its playmate with even the lightest touches, did the Yankees leap upon the punch soggy National League champions to shatter them yesterday for the fourth straight time, 13 to 6, in the final match of a series that for lack of real competition has only been equaled in the past by the Yankee conquests of 1927 and 1928.

For one day the bats of Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth that boomed like 16-inch guns in the victory of the first game here Saturday, lapsed into comparative silence, but there was no relief for the desperate cause of the shattered Cubs. From new, and hitherto peaceful quarters, the firing broke out with sudden, terrific effect, and five pitchers, Guy Bush, Lon Warneke, Jakie May, Bud Tinning and even old Burleigh Grimes went down under a stunning 19-hit barrage.

ACES TRUMPED

The composite picture of the five hurlers, the first two aces of the National League, gave the impression of a Dutch boy with no fingers at all trying to stem breaks in a dozen dykes at once.

There was but one last flare of hope for the vanquished in the final episode, as the Cubs, hitting almost like the Yankees at the start, soundly belted young Johnny Allen, freshman right hander and disposed of him with a four-run assault in the opening inning that was climaxed by Demaree's home run smash into the left field bleachers with two on bases.

It was a hope that quickly faded into disillusionment.

The Yanks slugged Bush from the peak in less than a round, although they counted but once, bashed Warneke for a pair of runs in the third and drove him out of there in the fourth, then they nicked Jakie May for a couple in the sixth and piled full force onto the unfortunate south-

They still are wondering what happened after the roof fell in at the West Virginia, Yale, Navy, Georgia, Maryland, Southern Methodists, Villanova, Michigan State and Texas University football camps today.

Sutherland

They are reflectively and tenderly massaging well-socked chins, which were left exposed in Saturday's college gridiron battles and which were well tapped as the upset weevil got in its deadly work.

It wasn't such an upset, was Pitt's victory over West Virginia, for the Panthers figured to take the Mountaineers apart to see why they ticked, but even the most optimistic of Panther supporters would have hesitated to have foretold such a decisive margin. The 40-0 count did not explain completedly the great superiority of the Pitt eleven, either, for if Coach Sutherland hadn't removed his regulars, goodness only knows what the score would have been.

DUKES WARNED

Pitt 40, West Virginia 0; Duquesne 3, West Virginia 0; Pitt 3, Duquesne 0. It looms like the Dukes are in for a busy afternoon this coming Saturday. They need all their fight, all their skill and all their luck if they are to escape a good trimming. And the Army, in the books for next week, may take due notice, too.

It was little William and Mary that put the quietus on Navy; Yates that made Yale like it with a scoreless tie; Virginia Poly that sprung it on Georgia; Virginia that upset Maryland; Texas Tech that sank Southern Methodist; South Carolina that disappointed Villanova; Michigan that trounced Michigan State so badly, and Centenary that lassoed University of Texas.

Aside from the surprisingly close fight Geneva gave Carnegie Tech, and Pitt's trouncing of West Virginia, matters ran true to form in the tri-state district over the week-end. Davis Elkins, expecting tough argument from West Liberty, was not disappointed, but managed to eke out a 7-to-6 victory. Waynesburg made it two straight by lacing Slippery Rock. Wash-Jeff, playing its first game under the tutelage of Hank Day, beat a veteran West Virginia Wesleyan eleven, 20-0, with Bob Diacle putting on a bone-crushing fullback act of his own to score three touchdowns. Indiana Teachers took Lock Haven, 12-0.

Bethany and Marietta battled to a scoreless deadlock in their "free admission" game at Bethany, which would indicate that if you don't have to pay to get in you get to see no scoring. Penn State evidenced unexpected power in beating game Lebanon Valley, 20-0.

COVERS BEATEN

Friday night, the Dukes routed Clove City's game but unreinforced Crimson varsity, 26-0, for their third win in as many starts and kept their goal line unsullied. Thiel went to Philadelphia and beat to Temple, as was expected. Grove Westminster was smacked down by George Washington. Granville provided somewhat of a test Virginia upset by beating Miem and Marshall had its mitts plenty full with little Morris Harvey.

Elmer Layden and Joe Bach sat in the press box at Morgantown with their pencils and papers and watched the Golden Panthers work out on the Mountaineers. They watched Greasy Neale as he wore a path stalking to and fro in front of the West Virginia bench. They watched another beat Pitt line, one that may turn out to be superior even to the powerful seven of last year, toss the Mountaineers all over and about their own field and watched it rip apart an eleven that their own Dukes had only been able to defeat by a very narrow margin. They'll have plenty to tell their Fight Riders today, and tomorrow and Wednesday and Thursday and Friday.

In short, the Dukes must come up to their big test with about as much hope of victory as the Cubs had in yesterday's final world series game after Cuyler fanned in the ninth.

All three of the local squads. Pitt, Tech and the Dukes, came out of their week-end tussles in good physical trim. The Tartans have a letdown game on for this week, meeting Western Reserve at Cleveland. Buck Nelle, Geneva fullback, who was injured in the game here Saturday, was discharged from Mercy Hospital yesterday.

OILERS BEAT CORRY

OIL CITY, Pa., Oct. 3.—Oil City scored a 13-0 victory over Corry here Saturday in a hard-fought battle. The Oilers registered their first touchdown and extra point in the last of the second quarter and again came through in the third period. Szafran and Zeisler scored the touchdowns for the Oilers.

Olympics Star Makes Gain in Sandlot Game

PEENY NEWLIN ON RUN AGAINST BELLAIRE . . . . . HE SCORED ONLY TOUCHDOWN OF THE BATTLE AT OLYMPIA PARK

OLYMPICS TOP BELLAIRE, 6-0

By TOM BIRKS

Two outstanding games in the Western Pennsylvania Independent Football Conference topped yesterday's heavy sandlot card. The Olympics, of McKeesport, defeated Bellaire Eagles, 6-0, at Olympia Park, and the J. P. Rooneys kept their unbeaten record clean by stopping West View, 7-0, at West View.

Coach Bill Sullivan's squad scored in the opening period at McKeesport. Charley Edwards, former Pitt quarterback, threw a pass from the Bellaire 30-yard stripe, and Minnick intercepted it. With the ball on the 45-yard line, Rudy Halpate failed to gain for the Tubers, and then he stepped back and hurled a perfect pass into Peeny Newlin's arms, and he ran 30 yards for the touchdown. The extra point kick was blocked.

The West View team gave the champions a battle at West View Park. It was the third quarter before Bucky Wagner, former Pitt star, got loose on the receiving end of a forward pass thrown by Jimmy Rooney, and galloped over the line for a touchdown. Auchter once galloped 30 yards to the Rooney 22-yard line, where he was pulled down by Mose Kelsch.

In other sandlot tussles yesterday, the Jaggies defeated the J. J. McGraths, 7-0; Jordans, of Rankin, won over the North Braddock Firemen, 7-0; Aliquippa Indians scored in the last period to defeat the Twenty-seventh Ward eleven, 7-0; the J. J. Doyles stopped the Irwin Mohawks, 13-6, and the Broadway Mounts trimmed the Bloomfield Civics, 19-0.

The Erie Pros, composed of former Duquesne University stars, won their second game by beating Lorain, 13 to 6, at Erie. The lineups of the Rooney-West View, McKeesport-Bellaire conference games:

SERIES PAINS BUC PREXY

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Reflecting the disgust and disappointment of every National League magnate as a result of the miserable showing of the league in the world series, William E. Benswanger, Pirate president, was back from Chicago today. Benswanger said he wished to forget "the worst world series in history," and he did not limit his remarks to the senior league.

"The pitching on both sides was terrible and both clubs were bad in the field. The Cub stars of the mound went up like a kite and other players went with them. I think some of the hurlers broke Prof. Picard's record as they ascended into the stratosphere above Lake Michigan. They should have a valuable message in the interests of science when they return, but it would have to do with pitching science."

BOOTS BUCCANEERS

An important letter was handed Benswanger at this juncture, but he had had a good warmup, so he jumped up again to exclaim:

"Oh, how I wish our Pirates had been in there against those Yankees. The Buccos would hit and run wild on the New York pitchers, if they hurled as they did against the Cubs. The Chicago team used very bad judgment, and neither club put over a smart piece of baserunning or otherwise injected a snappy play of the sort you expect to see when so-called champions get together."

Benswanger apparently was put out about one strategic move made by the Cubs in the second game of the series. With runners on first and second, none out, one run behind and the pitcher due to hit second, Jurges was allowed to bunt to put up the matter of driving in the tying run to the hurler. That move was an event of the early innings and certainly was stupid, to say the least.

CASH FOR PIRATES

Each regular member of the Pittsburgh club, including Manager George Gibson, Coaches Otis Crandall and Grover Hartley, and Trainer Charles A. Jorgensen, will receive $957.43 as his second-place share of the world series money.

The Pirates at a recent meeting split their money into 28½ shares. One full share will be divided evenly among Scout Bill Hinchman, Groundkeeper Jack Fogarty and Assistant Trainer George Asten. Each of the three will receive about $319. Vice President and Secretary Samuel E. Watters was voted the remaining half-share, which will amount to approximately $478.

The Athletics will share second money in the American League. Third money goes to the Dodgers and Senators, while Phillies and Indians will receive the fourth-place cash.

MASSEY BOUT RETURN GO

Sports Editor.

The Johnny Datto-Lew Massey bout at the new Arena, on the North Side, next Friday night, is a return engagement, Massey having won a 10-round decision over the Filipino in 1929.

Datto has had three bouts since making his residence in Pittsburgh. He knocked out Charley Baxter in four rounds in the first of these and then whipped Jimmy Dean, of Erie. He followed this up with his bout with Joe Marcus at the Meyers Bowl a few weeks ago, when Marcus received a split decision although many of the fans thought Johnny really beat Marcus.

A movement is under foot to bring about a return bout between Marcus and Battling Gizzy, who received a decision over him in the opening show at the Arena last Friday night which drew considerable booing from the fans. The fans are arguing pro and con about the matter, and such chatter almost invariably makes for rematches. A Marcus-Datto return billing also is in order because of the disputes over that decision.

Between Rounds

Lloyd Clements, who slopper Carl Gross his last time out, has won the favor of the fans with his punching and is due for considerable ring work this winter. He is only a light-heavyweight, but does not draw the line at tackling the heavies.

Young Gizzy, brother of the Battler, meets Jimmy Ferry in the main bout of an amateur boxing show under the auspices of the Volunteer Fire Department of Mt. Oliver in Allentown Turner Hall tomorrow night.

Larry French and Steve Sustonic will serve as judges of the amateur boxing show of Duquesne Council, Knights of Columbus, in their clubrooms in Oakland, Wednesday night. William Benswanger, president of the Pirates, will be timekeeper. Ernie Sesto, Carnegie Tech boxing coach, will referee.

Six bouts and vaudeville entertainment will make up the K. of C. program. The bouts: Eric Bredl vs. Joe Schultz, Art McGivern vs. Tuffy Lawson, Eddie Katklas vs. George Thomas, Frank Wingo vs. Johnny Thrpark, Patsy Contella vs. Gene Pier and Joe Sulk vs. Johnny Burke.

The card has been completed for the amateur boxing show to be held in the Moose Temple, Wednesday night, under the auspices of the Allegheny County Roosevelt-Garner Club, as follows: Walter Marn vs. Al Quail, Sparky Ewalt vs. Johnny Ochs, Tubby Mills vs. George Lupinacci, Lenny Burkinelli vs. Steve Kovach, Wade Stevens vs. Mike Wolf, Red Dayson vs. Clem Blaha, Felix Casciatti vs. Johnny Saville and Herman La Donne vs. Mike Piccione.

Promoter Jim McGirr, of McKeesport, is completing his bill for his second show of the indoor season, Thursday night. He has a good windup between Frankie Bojarski and Ray Vaas Hook, and a fine semi-final between Gene Morgiti and Paul Oger.

The benefit boxing show for the needy of Millvale, scheduled at Hickey Park last Monday night was postponed until tonight on account of rain, has been called off entirely.

CUBS' YOUNG HERO

YANKEE CLASS TOO MUCH FOR CUBS--RUTH

By BABE RUTH
Baseball's Highest Salaried Star

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Well, another series has gone into the records and I do not think there will be any dispute in the assertion that the Yankees had a little too much of everything for the Cubs. We got heavy hitting when it was needed, our pitchers held up better than theirs and we had more in reserve when the pinches came.

Babe Ruth

As a proof of this just look at the sort of pitching which Wiley Moore and Herb Pennock showed yesterday afternoon after our poor start. I expected that Johnny Allen would be able to stand the Cubs on their heads, but they stepped up and gave him such a rousing welcome that we were trailing by a 4-to-1 score as early as the first inning.

I didn't have much of a hand in this closing victory. Jakie May set me down twice on three pitched balls and once I lifted a high fly to short center. In the ninth when the home runs were popping, and Burleigh Grimes was bearing the brunt of our final assault, I grounded out. I mention these things to disprove the assertion that the Yankees consisted chiefly of Lou Gehrig and myself.

BOOSTS TEAMMATES

It is flattering to have that said about us, but it is not true. The Yanks keep on winning when we aren't hitting. As a matter of fact the remainder of the team got more homers during the past year than Lou and I collected. Gehrig was busy in the final slaughter, as he had been through the series, but the boys they were not watching stole the show. Those two homers by Lazzeri, the one by Combs and the frequent hitting of other players buried the Cubs. Proving that the punch of the Yankees runs the whole length of the batting order.

We beat the Cubs by getting an early jump on them, by making it necessary for Bush and Warneke to come back before they had enough rest, and because we had steadier pitching and heavier punch. These two latter features remained, before the series, to be proved. We trailed Charley Grimm's boys in number of hits through each of the first three games.

BABE ENJOYED SERIES

I enjoyed the series a lot. The Chicago fans gave me quite a razzing and several lemons came my way. The Cub players also handed me a lot of joshing. There was great delight in the stands when I fanned, and I got quite a kick out of the home runs in Chicago.

But it was in fun and I know there are no hard feelings on either side. The fans were on me because I criticized the Cubs on the way they voted their world series shares.

I found the Cubs a fine crowd of fellows ready to kid and be kidded, with a smile. The fans of Chicago have been so fine to me since I have been in baseball that I have no complaint, and they certainly are loyal followers of the Cubs.

Please do not take it as bragging when I express the opinion that the Cubs were overmatched in this series. They have a good hustling team, with plenty of courage, but it happened this year that neither league had a real standout team. The National League had several good clubs, while the American had three or four which thoroughly outclassed the field. The result was a great race in the National and a poor one in the American.

I rate Lou Gehrig as the outstanding player of the series, with more hits than any other player. Three home runs, eight runs batted in and always a threat which meant so much to our team.

NEWARK EVENS LITTLE SERIES

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Newark's big batting guns, silenced in the last games in their home park, banged loudly yesterday and when the echoes died away, they had projected the International League Champions back into the running in the little world series by a 5-to-2 victory over Minneapolis.

Unable to Cheer, Fans Boo Cubs—Bugs

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Othello didn't smother Desdemond any neater than the Yanks suffocated the Cubs.

The New Yorkers certainly poured plenty of water on their drowned mice. As a result of their generosity in dishing up outdoor entertainment the type of baseball displayed was very good marbles.

The only way Chicago could have registered in the last game of the series was to handle the Yanks the same way London managed the American Firemen. The American Firemen went to England to compete in the international competition.

The American Firemen won the tournament. But they were disqualified for being a lot of bloody acrobats.

The Chicago baseball fans sure proved to be real bleacherites. Having little to cheer about they wound up booing the home team. The little darlings must have their singing lessons, win or lose.

Nobody threw lemons at the Babe yesterday and the Babe had nothing to get mad about. He got himself a single just to keep the wolf away from his 1933 contract.

But a brand new menace hopped forth in another direction. That was Lazzeri who flipped two tiddlywinks into the grandstands. Tony went on an individual rampage and his two homers place him among those exalted personages who are entitled to place their autographs on bass drums.

Figuring out the series with the aid of the experts we are glad it's over. Baseball in October is as uncertain as strawberries in January. They may look good, but they're practically tasteless.

We compliment the Yanks any sympathize with the Cubs. The latter went down as gloriously to defeat as a well-digger going to work. Like a widow getting an offer of marriage they succumbed without a struggle.

They lost four straight and might have hung up a new losing record if the series had gone longer.

Baseball is over for the year and we'll see the boys again next opening day in April if it ain't snowing too hard.

CUBS VICTIMS OF MASSACRE

By NICK ALTROCK,
Baseball's Comedian

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Well, the Yanks put on their usual parade of the wooden soldiers with bats in their hands yesterday. About half a dozen Cub pitchers had a nice place in the reviewing stand watching singles, doubles and homers whistle past.

Nick Altrock

More than 50,000 Chicagoans played hookey from Sunday school to watch the worst slaughter the city has had since the St. Valentine's Day massacre.

The Cubs have only one satisfaction in dropping four games straight. They will put a lot of folks to work mailing back the ticket money for game No. 5.

BUSH OUT EARLY

Guy Bush started hurling for the Cubs, but you needed a stop watch to clock how long he lasted. For the Yankees, Johnny Allen was in there about long enough to earn his letter and from then on both pitching staffs practically created a drought in Chicago just from taking shower baths.

The strategy of the Cubs' pitchers was to pitch low to the Yankee sluggers. But yesterday a Cub would have to hurl in a subway to get 'em past those Yankee bats. What the Cubs needed to stop the New Yorkers was nine guys like George Pipgras playing against 'em. George is the kind of a player that can strike out on two and a half pitched balls.

A feature of the final pastime was Gehrig ordering an umpire around. But he might just as well have been talking to Andrew Jackson's equestrian statue out in Jackson Park. It seems when Gehrig came to bat in the sixth he wanted Umpire Klem to take his stance the other side of second base.

KLEM SATISFIED

Well, Klem said he was seeing the game fine from where he was and it was very satisfactory pondering on his supper menu just where he was standing then. This made Gehrig so mad he only cracked out a single when he intended a home run.

Oliver and Ward Share Casting Honors

W. R. Oliver, C. W. Ward and Carl Britenbach captured titles in the Pittsburgh Casting Club's city championship meet at Lake Carnegie, Highland Park yesterday afternoon.

Oliver had a score of 99 per cent in the wet fly accuracy event. Ward finished second. Matters were reversed in the three-eighths ounce accuracy test, Ward leading his rival and in the five-eighth ounce event, Carl Britenbach finished first and his brother, Val second.

STOCK PRICES DRIFT QUIETLY LOWER

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—The stock market found scant nourishment in week-end business news today, and prices drifted quietly lower.

Selling was in moderate volume, although there was a little more activity than during Saturday's trading. A feeble rally in the first hour soon petered out, and many issues slid down 1 to 3 points, although the decline was checked by early afternoon.

Rails were notably heavy, but several utilities and industrials also sagged. Oils held fairly well, and General Electric kept close to its previous closing level.

The filing of a bill in Federal Court asking for a receiver for the Nickel Plate again attracted attention to the situation facing the carrier, while efforts were still being made to obtain sufficient deposits of the 6 per cent notes which matured last week to make the refunding plan effective. Furthermore, the weekly report of the movement of revenue freight which appeared on Saturday showed an important gain only in the movement of coal, and an aggregate gain which came up only to about the normal expectation for that period.

The stock market has come into October with Wall street as a whole displaying considerable uncertainty as to its immediate course. Analysts pointed out that such business barometers as the movement of freight, and the production of steel, normally reach their seasonal peak in October. How much farther the recent improvement can be carried is now regarded as a matter of conjecture. Some quarters expressed that hope that improvement had been of such a fundamental character that it represented more than a mere seasonal upswing.

GRAIN PRICES AGAIN LOWER

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Grain prices tended downward early today, influenced by more than 4,000,000 bushels increase of the amount of wheat afloat for Europe. Argentina was reported offering wheat cheaper abroad. Opening unchanged to ¼ lower, wheat afterward declined all around. Corn started unchanged to a shade off and subsequently sagged further.

With the crop reports bearish, wheat soon declined more than a cent a bushel. Corn and oats were adversely affected by big receipts of corn here, 777 cars. Provisions were neglected.

HOME DEMAND GUIDES TREND OF BUSINESS

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—At the opening of the fourth quarter of the year, it is more apparent than before that the business outlook lies in the lap of the consumer.

Unfortunately, though consumer needs are large and growing, consumer purchasing power is still restrained by total unemployment for perhaps 11,000,000 persons, partial employment for others, and impoverishment for the 7,500,000 workers on the farms. A drive opens today to promote consumer buying power through spreading jobs. However, this does not increase the total outlay to labor, but merely attempts to redistribute it.

Mr. Rukeyser

Dealers, especially in textiles and apparels, have replenished stocks in anticipation of better consumer demand, and a slight pickup in employment since midsummer merits at least a little hope.

AWAIT STIMULUS

Indicative of the key position of the consumer is the comment by the Business Week, which pertinently says:

"Commodity prices have responded to their release from the extreme pressure of domestic and international deflationary forces by a moderate rise and now await the stimulus of expanding consumer demand."

Business has become more than customarily dependent on an expansion of the home consuming market. In alluding to the subject, a railroad president remarked to me:

"It would seem that the trend of business at present will be regulated entirely by the volume of consumer demand or the consuming power of the public. There seems to be no reason to suppose there should be any active resumption of building of various kinds, a source from which we receive the major portion of our business during good times.

NEW INDUSTRY NEED

"There is no new industry such as the automobile, radio, airplane, talking pictures, etc., in the picture except television and air conditioning. Television is admittedly in an experimental stage and can be looked upon as a luxury. Air conditioning is a development which, in normal times, would, in my opinion, assume a very definite position in the business world, but under present conditions can be loked upon as something that is highly desirable, but in no wise essential.

"You, of course, know the prospects for export and import are limited, and it would seem, therefore, that there is no good reason to suppose our business will reach a volume in the near future exceeding that which is occasioned by the demand of the consuming public.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The bond market suffered another nervous attack today and speculative loans, particularly, were subjected to some pressure at one time. The foreign department was irregular. The United States government group was dull but moderately firm.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

UPSETS MARK SCHOOL GRID BATTLES

By JULIUS LEVIN

With the scholastic football season in Western Pennsylvania less than three weeks old, favorites in the races for the various championships already have felt the presence of old man upset and as a result the fights for the titles are more open than ever.

The past week-end witnessed the fall of several elevens picked to make a determined bid for the championships of their respective classes, startling upheavals occuring in important Class AA, Class A and Class B contests.

Followers of the scholastic football trying to find a reason for the mediocre showing of teams, which in past years always ranked among the leaders in the championship races, can trace the demise of the average football eleven to the depression.

BOYS UNDERWEIGHT

A survey among the leading schools in the district discloses the fact that the majority of the grid players this fall are from five to 15 pounds under their normal weight, due to malnutrition. This unfortunate condition is more prevalent in the out-of-town schools, where many families, the heads of which are unemployed, are forced to seek assistance from welfare associations.

Two starting upsets marked games played in the City League on Friday. Westinghouse, fresh from a fine showing against Wilkinsburg the previous Saturday, fell before the Allegheny eleven in an intersectional game, 6-0.

Schenley High, one of the ranking teams in Section I, found a worthy opponent in Allderdice and barely managed to escape with a scoreless deadlock.

Another surprise was furnished by Crafton High, which held the Scott High eleven to a scoreless draw at North Braddock. This just about ruins Scott's hope for the Class A championship.

CHARLEROI BEATEN

Two of the teams which finished the 1931 campaign undefeated fell by the wayside in Saturday duels. Clairton High School, winner of the Class A title last season and undefeated since it bowed to Duquesne during the fag end of the 1930 season, 7-0, met its Waterloo in a battle with a scrappy Uniontown machine. Uniontown, beaten, 27-6, by Scott High in its opener, was not figured to give Clairton much of a contest, but the Everhart eleven surprised the critics by scoring a 12-0 decision over Woodman's team.

Midland, which finished second in the Class A race in 1931, saw its winning streak shattered by New Brighton, 9-0. Coach Lomond lost the majority of his veterans last spring and the Crucibles were not expected to make much of a fight for the title this fall.

AMBRIDGE WINS

Mt. Lebanon High, heralded as one of the strongest contenders for the Class A championship this fall, was checked in its drive by the surprising Ambridge High eleven, coached by Moe Rubenstein, 18-0.

Swissvale has a right to feel proud over its football team today. The Paulie-coached eleven not only upset the dope by defeating its old rival from Homestead, coached by Bill Campbell, 7-0, but obtained revenge for a 13-0 lacing suffered in 1931.

Wilkinsburg, picked as a favorite in the Class AA Conference, was outplayed by a small, but scrappy Rankin eleven, a Class B aggregation and barely managed to escape with a 6-6 deadlock.

Peabody, a member of Section I, of the City League, gave local scholastic fans a chance to sing its praises by the manner in which the East Enders defeated the powerful Johnstown eleven, 7-6.

Bambino Boosts Series Hitting Mark of .324

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth, participating in 10 world's series in a period of 17 years, has batted the pitching of National League champions for an all-time series average of .324.

The Babe did not begin to figure as a batting star in the baseball classic until he joined the Yankees back in 1921. While a member of the Boston Red Sox, he served only as a pinch hitter or as a pitcher. In his three world series classics as a member of the Red Sox he garnered only one hit, but he only participated in five games, going to the plate 11 times.

Ruth's greatest year in the world series was in 1928, when he wound up with an average of .625. His complete world series batting record follows:

paw for four runs in the seventh and the staggering Grimes for another four in the ninth.

The heaviest fire came from a gun that previously had sputtered as though the fuse were wet, Tony Lazzeri, and he belted two home runs in his anxiety to get his licks in before it was too late.

YANKS TOO TOUGH

Gehrig and Ruth, who shattered the Cubs with a pair of homers apiece Saturday were held to three hits between them, two of them by Larruping Lou, but Joie Sewell, Earle Combs and Bill Dickey as well as Lazzeri came away from their last chance with three hits each.

Once rid of Allen, the Cubs bumped into old Cy Moore, veteran of the 1927 conquests. The old Missouri mule tamer held them in submission until a pinch hitter brought Herb Pennock out to work the last three innings.

Pennock, never beaten in five full world series games, savior of George Pipgras Saturday, was as consistently effective as he always has been in a championship battle.

Pennsylvania Stars Win Lesley Cup

GREAT RIVER, N. Y., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Capt. Max Marston's Pennsylvanians made a strong comeback in the concluding singles matches Saturday to score a close victory over their New York rivals, 72½ to 68½, in the two-day battle for the Lesley Cup over the Timber Point Club course.

Massachusetts and Canada, the other two contenders for team honors, finished with 32 and 7 points, respectively. Canada failed to score a single point in the Scotch foursomes, loosing 15 matches, and Massachusetts' delegation, minus the services of Francis Ouimet and Jess Guilford, won only five matches and tied another.

The two leaders fought nip-and-tuck all the way, the Pennsylvanians leading by a slight margin at the conclusion of Friday's matches, but the New Yorkers pulling ahead, 47½ to 46½, at noon Saturday, after making 13 of a possible 15 points in the foursomes.

Dayton Pilot Wins In Jersey Race

WOODBRIDGE, N. J., Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Al Theisen, of Dayton, O., won the 25-mile feature race at the half-mile speedway yesterday to break the hold on first held by Bryant Saulspaugh and Bob Sall since the season opened.

Theisen was timed in 24 minutes 14 1-5 seconds and was trailed by Joe Russo, of Indianapolis, and Saulspaugh, Rock Island, Ill., driver. Soulspaugh and Sall, of Paterson, each had won two of the four previous 25-mile races.

Portland Captures Coast League Flag

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.—(AP.)—Portland, long the underdog of Pacific Coast League baseball, ended the 1932 season yesterday with the pennant stowed away for the first time in 18 years, holding a five-game margin over Hollywood.

The Ducks, splitting a double-header with Seattle, 5 to 2 and 9 to 12, wound up the season with 111 victories and 78 defeats for an average of .587.

VALENTINE

Captivating Story of a Shy Girl Rushed Into Love

By HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Val Appreciates Apartment More After Her Mother Pays First Visit

CHAPTBR XXXVII.

"She's adorable!" Joe said. "Simply adorable. And I do like the old gentleman. Gosh, he has a real appreciation of beauty. For that matter, your mother is certainly a collector's piece. She's more than beautiful, Val. She's—"

He searched for the word, and Val supplied it.

"Glamorous. I know. Everyone feels it. People stare at her, they always have. Oh, I'm so glad you like her—"

She had been so afraid that they wouldn't like each other.

And now Millie and her husband, Mr. Harris, were visiting in Val's house, and everybody liked everybody else, and it made her so happy!

Mr. Harris, fragile and distinguished, sat in a corner and talked art and architecture to Joe. Millie, with her raven-black hair looped at the back of her neck, her beautiful brows longer and lovelier than ever, her exquisite rose and white skin, and her generous, laughing carmine mouth was like some exotic flower on a slender stalk.

Millie wasn't only slim—she was really thin, almost angular. Her cheek bones showed so plainly now, and you realized the breadth of her beautiful shoulders and the slimness of her lips.

"I'm afraid she isn't well, that's all," Joe said. She's almost as fragile as the old man, and while that milk-white skin and brilliant coloring are lovely they don't denote health if I know anything about it."

"Oh, she's always been like that—except not so thin. She's dieting—"

"Well, you better tell her to stop it," Joe said.

MAGIC TOUCH

Val laughed at that. Just as if anyone could make Millie do anything she didn't want to do!

Millie was wonderful. She came into the house, and she didn't say anything. She didn't say, "My dear, if you'd just move that chair!" or "Rugs straight, never diagonal. Gracious! I thought everyone knew that!" the way Pearl Neely did. She just moved around, and touched things, and somehow things began to look different.

Millie had the magic touch. Things bloomed where Millie was. Even the sickly-looking geraniums in their pots looked livelier since Millie scratched up the earth around them and washed their dusty, greasy leaves.

Her fingers smoothed dejected-looking cushions, pushed cluttered ornaments into interesting groups. She pleated the "homemade-looking" curtains that Val had finally achieved in the living room with her strong, white hands, and they lost their awkwardness, became graceful and finished.

"What are we going to have for dinner?" She had followed Val into the kitchen, where she had gone to take a half-hearted look about in the hope that something could be offered—not a dinner, since there was nothing in the house, but something—a tomato juice cocktail, perhaps, for hospitality's sake.

MILLIE PREPARES FOOD

"Why, I don't believe there's anything," Val had said rather weakly. "I thought we'd go out for dinner."

"But it's such fun to cook! I could make an omelette . . . oh, my dear! You've got a can of clams. I'll do scrambled eggs and clams, the way Jim—the way we used to have them, oh, a hundred years ago!"

Up went her sleeves. "Let me have your apron, Val."

Val stood around, admiring, passing things. It must have been magic. Out of the odds and ends of some lettuce and a few vegetables Millie achieved a masterpiece of a salad, mixing the dressing the way she used to do, adding a drop of this and a drop of that, and tasting as she went.

"Why, Val, this is wonderful!" Joe said.

"Millie did it," Val admitted a little sadly.

And afterwards, when they were in the kitchen, cleaning up together, Millie scolded a little.

"Perfect nonsense, you're being so helpless," she said. Even if Julia didn't teach you anything, why can't you learn? Nobody taught me. I just learned. Why, the happiest days in my whole life were when I was living in some little dump where I could fuss and cook—"

"Why, Millie! You said only this afternoon that you were happy now because you had so much money you didn't have to do anything!"

A PERFECT EVENING

"Did I? Well, of course, I'm not so young any more—it makes a difference. But you, with that sweet boy and your whole life ahead of you! Nothing to regret, everything ahead ...oh, Val, you don't know what I'd give—to have my life to live over again. To be starting out as you and your Joe are starting—"

Millie's eyes were sweet and shining. She looked around the little kitchen, touched Val's two Russian cannisters with loving hands.

"I'd paint the whole room over—with that color scheme—lacquer red and black and gold. And you should wear white peasant dresses, with red and black smocking—remind me to send you some, and—"

"I'm going to do red and black wool embroidery on the curtains," Val cut in.

"Yes, and get Joe to make you a glass shelf, with brackets, for the plants—"

"You don't take care of them. You've got to love them, then they'll grow for you. I can grow anything, anywhere. Oh, Val, you haven't got your dishes arranged right at all. Now you pass them to me and I'll pile them on the drainboard and then we'll plan from the beginning."

"What in the world did you and your mother do in the kitchen?" Joe asked, when the long, perfect evening was over, and Millie and her nice Mr. Harris were gone.

"Oh, everything," Val said happily.

PLEASANT VISIONS

She saw the whole place changed. She saw it as she had once seen Millie's flat—a place of warmth and love and comfort. She saw herself, wearing one of the red smocked dresses, accomplishing culinary miracles. She could almost smell the sweetness of the crusty brown bread she would make, see the golden, heaving omelettes, the crip green salads, the jewel colored jams and jellies that would go into squatty glass pots, with labels "black currant," "quince," "orange and apricot" in her best writing.

She saw herself in the new black gown Millie had brought from Paris, saw the diamond bracelet, a translucent trickle of crystal, on her slim wrist. She saw herself, glamorous, young, beautiful like Millie. A princess whose hair was black as ebony, whose skin was white as snow, whose lips were red as blood—the snow-white, rose-red princess of the fairy tale.

"You're so beautiful," Joe breathed, watching her as she touched her black, satiny hair with her hands. "You're more beautiful this minute than you have ever been in your life!"

And she saw him, tall, tanned, handsome as Millie's Jim, with his eyes that were the color of sea-water, and his soft, close-cut hair like brown fur.

"Oh, Joe, I've been such a fool! I'm going to be so happy. I'm going to be so different. We'll be so happy, all of us—you and I and Millie and Mr. Harris. You won't know me, I'll be so good . . . oh, Joe, I DO love you!"

"I know, sweetheart, I know," Joe rocked her in his arms.

This is the turning point in our lives, he thought. Their marriage had been going to fail, and now it had turned the other way. Now they would always be happy—

Tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow. She saw them, stretched in beautiful shining order, and she and Joe and Millie and nice Mr. Harris . . .

And on the other side of the river in St. Paul's best hotel, Millie's maid was packing, while Millie, lovely and pale, and crying a little, stood by directing, in a low, monotonous voice.

"I can't tell you how sorry I am," her fragile, aged husband was saying. "But I must go myself. I can't trust an agent. The auction is so important. Why, some of the things are priceless treasures I've been struggling to get for years. I have clients that will pay anything!"

"Oh, I'm not complaining," Millie said. "I ought to be glad to go. I used to say I never had enough traveling. Once the thought of a sudden trip to London would have thrilled me. Don't look at me so sadly, Deems. I don't mind going. It's just that it's a little hard to leave Val again. I always think—I—I may never see her—again . . ."

Synopsis

Valentine Macfarlane is practically deserted at the age of 8 by her gay, widowed mother, Millie. She is brought up by a manhating maiden aunt, Julia, and becomes a stenographer. After a brief infatuation for the dashing Lester Sherwood, she marries a neighbor boy, Joe Carey, and goes to Minneapolis, where Joe is an architect. Val knows little about housekeeping or cooking. To return favors of a neighbor woman, Mrs. Peacock, Val and Joe plan a dinner. They also invite Pearl Neely, a friend of Joe's. Pearl begins to take liberties about the apartment. Val disapproves, but says nothing. Val visits Millie at a hotel in a nearby city. Val is surprised when she sees the frail, old man her mother married. Millie offers to give Val some beautiful gifts, but Val says they are too elaborate for her.

Now Go On

"I am going to be so happy," said Val.

Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Lillian Plan to Study Marion

Lillian's face and manner were like those of an impudent gamin as she asked Philip Veritzen whether he meant to tell us of his plans for the "revue" he had asked to give at our party or intended to "dance in, waving his hands and caroling 'Surprise! Surprise!'"

"My dear Lillian," he said indulgently, "you have guessed my intention with your usual clearness of insight. I do intend to surprise you. Later I will come over and consult with you both about a few minor details of management, but the nature of the entertainment I do not wish to divulge until you see it."

"My dear," he began again, pompously, but Lillian promptly deflated him.

"Yeah; I'm your dear Lillian," she said, "only don't call me that too often in my husband's hearing. You are such a fascinating devil he might get jealous, and I know that you never permitted a line in your productions at which an unborn babe could blush.

"So run along and sell your extras. We won't ask any more questions, and we'll be prepared for the thrill of our lives when you spring your surprise."

"Please!" I said a bit tremulously—it was the first time Lillian's volubility had given me a chance to speak—"you mustn't take too much trouble—give us something too elaborate. It will be an imposition." My voice trailed away as I became aware of Lillian's disapproving gaze.

PROTEST SMOTHERED

"Don't pay any attention to her, Phil," she said condescendingly. "She is new yet to the 'gimme' game, but she'll be very thrilled and thankful for your little revue. I'll have her in a proper frame of mind by the time you come again."

"Why didn't you let me protest?" I asked. "He may be planning something so elaborate that it will cause comment and make Dicky terribly angry."

"Dicky will be terribly angry—for a minute or two, anyway," she said, "but that doesn't mean anything.

"As for Phil's staging anything too elaborate, don't you know the greatest producer of his time any better than that?" she asked. "True, he's a bit flamboyant in speech and mannerisms now and then, but he has the most exquisite sense of proportion in his stage effects of anybody, bar none. Whatever he brings will fit in perfectly with your party as planned.

"You lucky girl! One man taking all the men-guests and family to his house for the night, and another providing a revue! And of course they'll both send oodles of flowers. Now if you only had another masculine admirer who was a chef or could provide on——"

WANTS TO WATCH GIRL

But as, my patience exhausted, I advanced upon her with a sofa pillow, ready to smother further speech, she dodged lightly away from me and finished her sentence from the doorway—

"And a fourth who had an orchestra, or perhaps that's part of Phil's plan."

I threw the pillow, but it hit the door, which she had closed just in time. Two minutes later her voice sounded from the door at the other end of the room.

"Honest! No fooling. I'm through with persiflage. I want to talk to you seriously. May I come in?"

"Yes, if you'll behave yourself," I told her severely.

"Never so good a girl as Lil," she caroled as she seated herself opposite me. "It's about the Brixtons and Owen. Will you write or telephone?

"Telephone," I decided swiftly. "There won't be time to write. I must ask Ronald to get those other Yale boys on long distance, and Harry—"

"He'll rustle the cadets for you today," she promised. "But I want you to do one thing for me before you telephone. Will you?"

"It's already done," I told her, affectionately. "Name it."

"You haven't told the young people anything about the party yet, have you?"

I shook my head.

"Then," she said briskly, "will you send for the three girls, Mary, Marion and Carolyn, tell them about the party, and ask Carolyn casually if she thinks her father and mother and 'Uncle Charlie' can come. I want to watch Marion's reaction to the proposal."

SUN-TELEGRAPH-WARNER THEATERS JUNIOR KOMIC CLUB

The parade which was held in East Liberty Saturday morning was not political, but was a parade of the members of the Enright Chapter of the Sun-Telegraph-Warner Theaters Junior Komic Club, and ended a week's activities by the members in the sign contest which Manager Bill Zeilor announced last week.

There were four prizes—largest—smallest—novel—best sign made by the members and pertaining to the picture which is now running at the Enright.

Bill Eismen, who, it seems, is hard to beat in any of the contests, won first prize with the largest sign in the parade. Albert Hutfles' sign was judged the best, and it is safe to say that he spent many hours on his creation. It was colored very beautifully. Mary Smith told the other members that it looks as though she and her family will have to eat turkey for the next week, and, judging from the number of turkey feathers she used on her sign, she's right. She won in the novelty class.

NEW GAME

After the judging the signs the dancing school under the direction of Ruthie Miller held the center of attraction for the girls, while the boys grouped in a corner to think what game they would like to play. Not knowing that Mr. Zeilor had arranged a contest for them, they were not only surprised but delighted when he announced that a "dribbling" contest would be next for boys only.

This is something new in the way of games. The boys were split in two groups, one on each side of the stage, and each group was given a basketball. The object of the game was for the first boy to take the basketball and "dribble" or bounce it across the stage through a hoop and around the team lined up on the other side and back through the hoop and bounce the ball to the second boy in line. The girls during this game were interested spectators and cheered the boys on to greater speed. The boys ever gallant tried to please the girls and the result was the game ended with neither side winning.

While the boys were resting a rope jumping contest was staged for the girls and Catherine O'Neill was the winner. The boys decided that they could jump rope just as good, if not better than the girls, so they held a rope jumping contest and the results were just about the same as the "dribbling" contest.

The black and gold sextet sang several popular songs followed by the Ingersol Midgets who sang "Say It Isn't So" and ended with a very cute dance. Ruth Barclay did a fast tap dance which was well received by the audience. Next the Sunshine Triplets did a military tap dance and Louise Foley offered an acrobatic specialty which brought rounds of applause from the members present.

Five clever youngsters entertained the members of the Schenley Chapter with music, songs and dances. They were: Joan Lally, Charles Strain, Frank McGough, Walter Ranhecker and Charles Miller.

Capt. William Campbell, famous autogiro airplane pilot and stunt flier, will visit many of the Junior Komic Clubs next Saturday and tell the members about his many experiences as a pilot of these new and somewhat tricky airplanes which are able to land and take off in a space not much bigger than an average size room. We feel sure that every boy and girl will be interested in hearing what this noted flier will have to say.

Boating in the Home Now Within Reach of Common People

It is not very often that we get enthusiastic about fresh water sports—but when American inventive genius makes it possible to canoe with safety in the home, who are we to snap a finger in the face of progress? This bedroom express cruiser gets you there and brings you back. And on week-ends it becomes a safety tub, for bathing. It has no leaky faucet—so if you fall asleep in the tub you dont have to sleep with your mouth open to keep the tub from running over.

The New Utility Policy

With Only a Short Term Assured, the New Public Service Commission Must Work Rapidly.

Dr. Clyde L. King, formerly secretary of revenue, was sworn in as chairman, and P. S. Stahlnecker, for many years Gov. Gifford Pinchot's secretary, as a member, of the Public Service Commission Saturday. With their installation the board has a majority committed to a new policy, and the people of Pennsylvania, for the first time in years, confidently can expect to get a square deal in public utility matters.

The new policy, as stated by Gov. Pinchot, is to defend actively and militantly the public rights and the public interests, and not merely to pass on complaints that may be brought by the citizens, but to take the initiative in protecting the people from unfair treatment by the public utilities.

The new policy is the right policy. Unfortunately, no assurance can be had that it will continue to be the commission's policy after Gov. Pinchot goes out of office. The Senate did not confirm the appointment of Frederick P. Gruenberg and George W. Woodruff as members of the Public Service Commission, and there is no reason to believe that the latest appointments will be confirmed. The Governor's appointees, constituting a majority of the board, are likely to lose their places when Pinchot's term expires.

They are assured, then, of a tenure of office of not more than two years and a few months. That is not a long term, but it should suffice, with rapid, hard work, to remedy some of the wrongs that have been inflicted on the people by the public utilities under the old regime.

Meanwhile if the Senate committee which is to investigate the relationship that existed between the old Public Service Commission and the public utilities companies does its work well, it may be that the administration that succeeds Gov. Pinchot's will not dare go back to the old system. Gov. Pinchot has charged that at least two members of the old commission were bribed by the utilities companies to favor them in the adjudication of disputes.

If Attorney Oliver K. Eaton acts as counsel for the investigating committee, as proposed, the inquiry should be searching and go a long way towards clearing the atmosphere. Eaton, as Senator James J. Coyne, a member of the committee, says, is "a good digger;" he proved it by the manner in which he cross-examined witnesses in the United States Senate investigation of the coal strike of 1927.

The new developments in the long struggle of the people for justice in utilities matters are all encouraging; but the time has not yet come when vigilance can be relaxed.

There Are Exceptions

Director Lang Is an Example of a Public Official Who Has Not Put Relatives on the Payroll.

The Sun-Telegraph's series of articles on nepotism has shown it to be a common practice of city and county officials to place their relatives on the public payroll. Mayor Charles H. Kline, all three of the County Commissioners, and a host of subordinate officials have relatives on the payroll. Senator James J. Coyne says he has so many kinsmen and kinswomen in public jobs that he is not sure he can remember them all.

It is a pleasure to know that not all of the officials in position to do so have thus "taken care" of members of their families, nor do all approve of it.

Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, who was Director of Public Safety in Mayor George W. Guthrie's administration and has held other public offices, says:

"I have never in my public career had a relative on any public payroll, as the practice is not in keeping with my ideas of public office."

We do not maintain that a public official is never justified in giving a job to a member of his family. But when the thing is carried to the extreme that has been reached in Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, it suggests that merit and ability are secondary considerations, and that selfish private interests are given precedence over the public service.

Not an Easy Job

The State Medical Convention Calls Attention to Some Of the Requirements of the Profession.

The State Medical Society is holding its eighty-second annual meeting in Pittsburgh this week. In a bulletin urging its members to attend the sessions the Allegheny County Medical Society remarks that they offer "a graduate study course featured by 13 guest teachers from outside our own state, 76 papers and 19 case reports prepared in advance by our fellow Pennsylvanians, and a scientific exhibit, with moving picture theater, graphically setting forth the approved, as well as the experimental, in medical progress."

It is a reminder that no physician can ever be said to have finally mastered his profession. There is always something new to learn. He must keep eternally studying if he is to keep abreast of developments. There is probably no other profession in which so much work of this sort is required of the conscientious practitioner. His education never ceases.

The hours that a physician spends with his patients consume only a part of the time required by his job. He may give the needed service in a jiffy, but it has taken years of study and observation to accumulate the information and skill that enabled him to render it—a point that is often overlooked in passing judgment on the fairness of the doctor's bill.

'Penitence and Prayer'

The Depression May Not Be a Punishment, but Religious Services Will Give Many Consolation.

Some persons believe the depression is a punishment inflicted by the Deity because of the sins of the contemporary world. Others scoff at the idea.

Whatever may be the case, no harm can be done by special religious services. On the contrary, they will furnish consolation to many.

Religion and the depression were linked together in a striking way at Dunbar, Pa., a few days ago when a child invoked Divine grace as a prelude to applying the torch which renewed operations in a glass plant and enabled 150 men long idle to return to work. The child said, while the workmen knelt with bowed heads:

"We thank God for His goodness in presenting such a means of relief, and we pray Him to cause continuance of orders which will provide long production."

Prayer, whether in the form of an appeal for aid, or as thanksgiving, is always impressive.

What Women Won't Tell

* * *

Domestic felicity is that state of armed neutrality between husband and wife, which is regarded as "perfect happiness," until it breaks out into a little shooting party.

* * *

It takes all the kick out of a masculine "vice" to have the women take it up and turn it into a feminine fad. There's no fun in doing things that your wife approves of and your grandmother indulges in.

Woman is the superlative of the human race. No man can be as saintly as a good woman, as malicious as a bad woman, as glamorous as a beautiful woman or as foolish as a silly woman.

* * *

Woman may have been made from the rib of a man: but there are times when every married woman suspects that man was made from the rib of a mule.

* * *

Lots of women are splendid citizens and red hot little patriots—until it comes to going out to register in a bad rainstorm.

Every man is a playboy at heart, an adventurer by nature, a Romeo or a Don Juan in his own imagination, and a husband only by accident or force of circumstances.

* * *

The first bitter quarrel, in which they exchange sneers and recriminations is a blow-out on the road to happiness. After that, love always seems somehow to scrape along on a flat tire.

* * *

EUROPE DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Due to the six-hour advance over New York time, sleeping is difficult until Nature performs her adjusting. Consequently my wife and I have become steady breakfasters at the markets. Last night we thrilled to the liquid green beauty of a moonlit Bois.

We circled lakes, skirted and plunged through forests. After midnight lovers huddled the benches. The blue of the astonishingly low sky was scalloped in silver, glinting a velvety sheen on the mossy boles. The Seine, in shadow of stately cypresses, floated smoothly, still. St. Cloud was a lacy twinkle of lights!

Now and then through a gap in some glade, walking on the dead leaves of centuries, was silhouetted a figure—perhaps a poet or an artist, dreaming The Big Dream. Castle-like al fresco restaurants—Pre Catelan, Armenonville—seemed in the blue haze sleeping tombs of aqua-marine. Silent, brooding.

The Bois is a symbol of love at full tide—a poem of ardour. No other spot is so definitely romantic. Even the air is especially sweet, moist, perfumed. We circled out as morning slashed the pink sky. Birds, insects, all Nature were in an asymptote—do I seem tense or anything?—of appreciative applause.

So back to Place Vendome through clean swept rues tucked behind big boulevards—phantoms of glassiness in the clear white gaslight. Concierges sit in door chairs until 9 p. m; then life dries up like ink on a blotter. From then on a single footfall becomes a hollow undersong, echoing vague terror.

* * *

The Citroen electrically lighted ad on Eiffel Tower split Paris into factions. The friable artistic considered it sacrilege, the stolidly practical considered it added revenue for the city. Anyway, we stopped to watch it in action last night. It changes 14 times—a giant rose bush, flashes of lightning, a constellation of stars, a sky high fountain rising and falling, etc., etc., etc. Only once does it burst into a full length spelling out of C-i-t-r-o-e-n.

* * *

Parisian bars, brasseries, comptoirs and whatnots are deserted by 10 o'clock. Tables and chairs are piled high inside and cleaners give the ever gaudy glitter a next day polish. This is a day-drinking town. It begins with an 11 a. m. tipple and ends with after-dinner cordial or wine.

* * *

Deserted brokerage offices, inspired by the early August rise, are filling again. The market for New York stocks opens at 3 in the afternoon and closes at 8. It is a mixed crowd in the board rooms—Greeks talking to Chinese, Argentines, Swedes, Moroccans, Hindus and so on. In one I saw Jack Hobby, of Palm Beach and elsewhere, the eternally youthful Edna Wallace Hopper and, of all things, a blondined male Senegalese with a tooting old monocle, my word.

* * *

Swinging out of the Plaza Athenee this afternoon was a well known stage dancer who has been wining and dining in Paris for six weeks. "I'm off," she cried, "to Vichey to get debloated."

* * *

I also ran across Col. Joseph Hartfield, international lawyer, who had just flown from Copenhagen in seven and one-half hours, skimming over seven different countries. We took a short drive around the city and I showed him rue Moufftarde, a tortuously dingy and cut-throaty street—one of the oldest in Paris—back of the Pantheon. It is my one beau geste in Paris boulevardiering, the only street I know out of the usual routine. But I always intimate it's just a sample of my amazing repertoire.

* * *

Four cocottes, with degage smiles and raspberry nails, occupied an adjoining table along a Champs Elysees terrasse this twilight. Smartly dressed, they expressed that provocative elan that somehow suggests simple surrender. A whispering waiter, bowing toward them, urged a meeting. I had a notion to borrow a nearby ear trumpet and join the ladies. If embarrassed I could query: "What say?" Oddly, nymphs du pave retain a greater freshness than more meticulously-minded women of France.

* * *

Like Mark Twain, every visit to France I feel that this is the time I'm going to bust right out speaking the language. But each time it is messier.

* * *

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Do men and women take trouble differently?

Do women like to go into a huddle with their troubles; get together and talk them over; take their tragedies apart and put them together again?

And, on the other hand, do men want to walk out on grief; get over it by refusing to talk or even think about it?

George Birdsong said they did. George is the muchly muddled hero-villain in Ellen Glasgow's new book, "The Sheltered Life." Marriage to a perfect woman been too much for poor Georg. He cracked under the strain Found himself gabbling. Loathed himself for it. Cried out:

"WOMEN LIKE TO SIT DOWN WITH TROUBLE AS IF IT WERE KNITTING, BUT MEN ARE DIFFERENT. MEN MUST GET AWAY, OR TAKE A DRINK, ONE OR THE OTHER."

Many a man, reading that, will give a snort—a snort which his wife won't understand, and wh[ich] he'll be hard put to explain. For there, in a mouthful, is the whole case of male versus female psychology.

Women DO like to go into a huddle with trouble. If you don't believe it, ask your telephone operator; or just try to break into any domestic line between 10 and 12, when Mabel is spilling the dirt to Rose, and Annie is talking things over with Mame.

Word by word, wheeze by wheeze, Mabel and Annie, Rose and Mame go over the evidence.

What evidence? Any evidence

Evidence as trivial as the details of Dorothy's permanent wave. Evidence as tragic as the story of pretty, foolish Amy Brown's suicide. Details so silly or so ghastly that a man would blush with shame, or yawn to boredom, or gag with horror if he had to hear them.

"What on earth do women find to talk about?" Never a man who has not asked that question.

But, on the other hand, is there anything that makes a woman madder than a man's habit of sliding out of situations?

Why can't he sit down and talk things over? Doesn't he care? Or is he just a big baby, and can't bear to face things?

Why are men that way? Why are women that way?

It is because a man finds life OUTSIDE himself? Finds answers to his questions and relief for his troubles in activities that lead him away from himself, that help him lose himself in the world of affairs?

And so, when a man finds himself involved in trouble, he naturally walks away, tries to forget, tries to do something else. For that is how and where a man naturally functions—"by doing something else."

But a woman is different. A woman finds life INSIDE herself. She finds her answers, her solutions in her own emotions; in the meanings that lie behind words and the motives that lurk beneath gestures. Where a man goes OUT to seek relief, she turns IN.

Both seek relief. Both manage to find it. But each sex finds it according to its own nature.

So a man isn't as heartless as he seems when he walks out on trouble, and a woman isn't as morbid as she seems when she huddles over it.

Roosevelt's Plain Talk on Power

By Claude G. Bowers

The manipulation of the market, with stocks rising without a corresponding increase in the earnings behind them, continues with ups and downs and the administration in Washington is watching the ticker tape with apprehension as though the people can be deceived again as in 1928.

More significant is the statement just issued by H. D. Gibson, president of the Manufacturers' Trust Company, in reference to the need for more funds than ever before to prevent the starvation of the victims of the stupidities of the administration's sin of omission and commission.

He says:

"The coming winter is certain to be more severe, as far as unemployment distress is concerned, than last winter, irrespective of possible recovery of business."

Just how there can be a real recovery of business with 40,000,000 involved in unemployment and without purchasing capacity is something beyond the ordinary intellect. We are not so much interested in the manipulation of stocks as in the notice that "the coming winter is certain to be more severe as far as unemployment distress is concerned than last winter." But "unemployment distress" has never interested the Hoover Administration so much as the rise and fall of stocks.

A 'Radical and Dangerous Man'

Mr. Roosevelt's speech at Portland on public utilities and power is one of his strongest and one that appeals most strongly to the self-interest of every man and woman in the land. Because of his position on this subject he has been pictured by Wall street propagandists and publicists as a "radical and dangerous man."

No one of ordinary common sense, or with any civic consciousness, can read the Portland speech and find anything in it to cause alarm among honest men. It may be alarming to the plunderbund of the utilities who have succeeded so long through the watering of stock and the ruthless use of monopolistic power, with the sympathy of a government that has betrayed the people, in exploiting the millions of consumers. Mr. Roosevelt takes the position that the people's power resources belong to the people and must not be turned over for the people's exploitation.

He proposes to end the shameless under-cover manipulations by throwing the light of publicity on "capital issues of stocks, bonds and other securities, liabilities and indebtedness, and capital investment and frequent information as to gross and net earnings."

How many thousands of people ruined in the Insull collapse would have been spared had there been such publicity before!

Propaganda in The Schools

The disclosure by the Federal Trade Commission some time ago of a shameless, highly subsidized campaign of "lies and falsehoods" by the power combines is fresh in the public mind. Appalling amounts were spent in the purchase of journalistic and pedagogic prostitutes. Vast sums were spent in a brazen effort to introduce this power combine's propaganda into the schools. Professors were bought to teach it to their classes in economics.

This was appalling for several reasons; appalling in the plot to degrade the schools to purchase and subsidize the agencies of publicity, to poison the public against its own interest.

It was appalling, too, in that the money spent measures the loot to be had by a few men if the public can be lulled into a false sense of security.

Played the Game Of the Interests

These people who engaged in this infamous business are now arrayed unitedly against Roosevelt and for Mr. Hoover. This is because the former has the public interest and the latter the private interest view of the issue.

Year after year, while Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Hoover was a favorite guest and speaker at the conventions of these power and utility people; in every speech he scornfully denounced Federal regulation; in all of them he praised the things that Roosevelt says must stop. He played the game of the interests against the people in the case of the St. Lawrence; and in the case of Muscle Shoals, and he packed the Power Commission against the public interest.

That is the reason Wall Street is for Hoover and against Roosevelt.

The Public Is Interested

And yet Roosevelt says at Portland he prefers private operation with proper public control; but that where a community is convinced that a monopolistic utility is less advantageous to their interest than public ownership would be, they must have the right to operate their own plant.

Is all this of interest to the ordinary man? The use of electrical power is now almost general in all homes — even in the country. Public utilities affect the purse in almost every home. Last year out of the pockets of consumers more than $4,000,000,000 were passed to public utilities—which means an average of $133 from every family in the land.

So the public is interested, whether it realizes it or not, to the tune of four billion dollars a year.

But the rates are fixed to pay dividends on stock watered by the hundreds of millions; and, with such regulation as we have, monopolistic greed exacts a toll ridiculously more than it should.

Roosevelt proposes, through Federal regulation and the ending of swindling through publicity, to enforce the utility rates down to a reasonable and fair figure—and that is all.

Mr. Hoover With The Exploiters

Throughout the 12 years of his service as cabinet member and President, Mr. Hoover has gone along sympathetically and aggressively with the exploiters; fighting their battles openly; refusing to enforce the federal water power act; making speeches in utility conventions against federal regulation. But he has discovered that there are more voters among the consumers than among those who have been exploiting the consumers. Thus he has now come out for federal regulation, eating his own words in the utility convention speeches which were circulated by the hundreds of thousands.

But what kind of regulation?

He who deliberately packed the Power Commission against the public interest cannot be trusted; he who has the support of the exploiters of the consumers is not the man to be trusted in their battle for their own rights.

The Issue Is Clear Cut

Roosevelt leaves no doubt as to where he stands. There are no double-meaning words in the closing paragraphs of his speech at Portland:

"Judge me by the enemies I have made. Judge me by the selfish purposes of these utility leaders who have talked of radicalism while they were selling watered stock to the people and using our schools to deceive the coming generation.

"My policy is as radical as American liberty, as radical as the Constitution of the United States.

"Never shall the federal government part with its sovereignty and control over its power resources while I am President of the United States."

And so the issue is clear cut; and it is the people's feast or funeral.

Isn't It So?

The way to be sure people always will be loyal to their country is to let each one of them own a little of it.
